The Condon Globe speaks slightingly whose resignation as colonel of the third to recall his resignation and continue as be very small without half trying. On draw his resignation at a time when there was a probability that the third regiment might have a chance for actual service. A coward would have insisted on the acceptance of his resignation to escape the dangers of real war. It is not often men are held up to ridicule for offering their services in defence of their country but, as we said before there are some very small people in the world.

CARRIED MESSAGES.

MESSENGER BOYS WHO HAVE AC-QUIRED FAME AND WEALTH.

Messrs. Carnegie, Oliver, Pitcairn, Mc-Cargo and Moreland Were Youngsters a Pittsburg Telegraph Office Together-How They Were Promoted.

The story of five messenger boys begins in the early days of telegraphy. In a dingy office in Pittsburg, about 1848. Andrew Carnegie, Henry W. Oliver. Robert Pitcairn, Major William C. Moreland and David McCargo were messengers. It is said that they took the opposite of other boys and spent their spare moments in learning useful lessons. Andrew Carnegie is the oldest of the lot, and he was the smartest, leading all in learning how to telegraph. He was one of the first operators in the country to learn to take the Morse system by sound. which in those days was considered a remarkable achievement. It did not take Thomas A. Scott long to snatch Mr. Carnegie from the telegraph office in Pittsburg into his office as private secretary when the great railroad genius took charge of the Pittsburg end of the road. The education the young Scotchman received from a greater mind lifted him from a secretary's seat into the of the fact that Colonel T. A. Houghton, Mr. Scott was made vice president of place of division superintendent when the railroad. The industry, the subtle regiment O. N. G., was placed in the cunning and watching faith of Scott hands of the adjutant-general three to taught him to lay his lines in other difour months ago, and who "now at a time rections than watching the divisions of when he thinks he has a chance to win a railroad, and Scott helped him. The Salvation Army has been established in Butte for one year, and in a summary of what it has done, the Inter-Mountain states that it has enlisted 180 men who one year ago were in the slums and gutters, but who now lead honorable and industrious lives. This is a record of which the army may well be proud, and the incident goes to show that the Salvation Army, besides being the butt of many a joke, is capable of doing some good.

A TRIUMPH IN TELEGRAPHY. The fourth member of the group is David McCargo, the general manager of the Alleghany railroad. His strong Several of the men who fought that day Scotch character lifted him into big railway concerns early. He left the telegraph office soon after the other boys and took a place on the railway.

"Think of it," said Major William P. Moreland, the last, but not least, of the famous five. "I stood at the key with Carnegie, Oliver, Pitcairn, McCargo, and heard the first message pass over the wires that was sent between the north and south. James D. Reid, who was neys in the dark continent the chief of general superintendent; David Brooks, now living in Philadelphia, and Jackson passing greeted him with distinguished Duncan, of Cincinnati, had charge of consideration. He even brought out a the experiment. We had to work on row of 853 councily negro maidens invit- short circuits in those days, and we thought it was impossible to send a message to New York from New Orleans. Brooks and Reid walked over and inspected the line from the Crescent City to Pittsburg. After arriving here and assuring themselves that the line was perfect, the effort was ordered and every telegraph operator on the line, and in fact the whole country, was waiting in suspense to know the success or failure of the effort. Every magnet was adbeing made by the democratic majority in congress to have lumber put on the free list. This is not politics, it is busiphia; the Quaker City signaled Harris-burg, and then in quick succession Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Louisville and New Orleans were opened to the metropolis paralyze the lumber trade of the north- No one drew a breath scarcely until the tick came, and in a minute an unbroken message was sent between the north and a law, it will bankrupt the lumbermen south. That may seem primitive in these days, when there is no measuring electric power; but then it was the talk of the nation. This is a bit of untold history; but 1 shall never forget that hour."-New York Sun.
