A subscription list was then submitted to the meeting and in a very few work-making a total of $705-was subpeople seemed terribly in earnest and while it was well known that considerable differences of opinion existed as to the best location for the proposed grade all minor differences disappeared before the one absorbing desire to procure a road. At one part of the meeting there was a long discussion about the best method to adopt in building the grade—whether by contract or otherwise. All finally agreed that the matter could be safely left to the window of the country. safely left to the wisdom of the county court and the committee appointed to confer with it. The opening of this roadwill be of immense benefit to the citizens of the three precincts of Tygh, Wamic and Wapinitia. What the new grade may cost it is of course impossible to tell at present. We are persuaded the people, more nearly interested, will help the work to the full extent of their ability but if the work should prove more expensive than is anticipated and never be laid up against it, neither in given the boys in whose honor the party this world nor in the world that is to had met together, and all separated at come. Building Superstitions. In remote times a sacrifice of some kind was always offered at the completion of a building, either public or private. Sacrifices were not only offered at the completion of structures of all kinds—the foundations themselves were structure was a castle, bridge, cottage or church. Originally-tracing the subject back to heathenish thues-the sacrifice, was offered to the god under whose protection the building was placed: in Christian times the bloody rite was retained, but was given another signification. In those days it was generally believed that no edifice would stand unless the corner stone was laid in mortar mixed with blood. Usually the blood was obtained by sacrificing a dog. a pig. a wolf, a black cock or a goat, and not unfrequently some malefactor's blood was poured out to make the ceremony more impressive.-St. Louis Re-

Price of Toothpicks.

The little whitewood toothpick pointed at both ends was patented in America in 1866, and would seem a small article to create a monopoly in; yet a factory at Bucksfield, Me., used up many thousand cords of wood every year in the manufacture of this small article. The cord of wood consists of a thousand billets or four loads. Two thousand five hundred and a large profit was made. Now, the patent having run out, many others have gone into the trade, and prices have fallen to fivepence on 2,500 toothpicks retail, and even lower wholesale. Chambers' Journal.

La Grippe!

The tendency of this disease toward pneumonia is what makes it dangerous. La Grippe requires precisely the same treatment as a severe cold. Chamber-lain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures of severe colds. This Remedy effectually counteracts the tendency of the disease to result in pneumonia, provided that proper care be taken to avoid exposure when recovering from the attack.
