Dr. Hollister went out last night to reduce the fracture and he reports the boy doing as well as could be expected.

Examples of School-Marm Erudition.

There is never a teacher's examination that is not followed by a growl at somebody or something, by the defeated candidates and the school superintendent generally comes in for his full share of abuse. Of course it is a pity that everbody who applies for a certificate cannot get one, but the best possible justification of our excellent superintendent lies in the fact that many of those who would be teachers of others, need often to be taught themselves the simplest rudiments of a common school education.

THE STAR ROUTE SERVICE.

Privations Undergone by Mounted Mail

Carriers of the Rural South. The Star route mail service of this country has made many men rich and kept many men poor. The mail carrier who jogs along the muddy country roads in this state generally has not an extra coat to his back and few extra dollars in his pocket. The big contractor, on the other hand—the man who buys up many routes from the government-frequently has more money than he knows what to do with. At least, other persons, especially the humble mail carrier, sometimes thinks so. However, the profit in this business is not what it once was, by a good deal, for competition, that leveler of incomes, is now close.

The contract lasts four years, beginning with July 1. Every route must be bid for separately and a separate bond given for each. The government is very particular in this respect. The bids are made according to the weight of the mail to be carried, the distance of the route and the number of times per week it has to be carried. In few if any cases does the man who makes the successful bid carry the mail himself, for generally The following answers were given to one man or one firm gets several hunthen sublets the routes to men who agree to carry it for so much per year. There is generally a vast difference between his idea of what it costs to carry the mail and the government's.

It is said that some carriers, who have to work every day, do not make fifty cents per diem. Besides, they have to furnish their own conveyance. It is generally carried on horseback, though a buggy, a 'bus or a stage may be used. This, in fact, is the distinctive characteristic of a Star route as different from other forms of mail service. The government does not specify how it shall be

The hardships of the street car driver are nothing compared with the suffering that some of the mail carriers in this state have to undergo. In rain, snow, sleet or hall they have to take their long daily rides. The thermometer may get so low that cattle freeze in the field, but the mail carrier is supposed to be invulnerable for the pay of fifty cents a day. He has to catch trains on pain of losing his contract, and thereby forfeiting his bond, when the roads are little less than beds of quicksand. He has to feed his horse, feed himself and family, not to mention clothing and the expense of keeping his vehicle in order, if he uses one, for fifty cents a day. They must be wonders of economy, these mail car-

In some portions of the state, especially in the southeastern part, the mail carrier has to go only once a week. There are places not fifty miles from Louisville where mail is received only three times a week. The carrier, however, has one thing to compensate for his small pay, where mail is delivered only once a week. He is a very important personage there, outranking the country squire, except when the examining trial of a murderer is to be held. An eager crowd, who have not heard from the outer world for six days, await his arrival. The first sight of him, as his horse turns a bend in the country road, is a village sensation, the greatest probably since he made his last trip. In addition to the mail he carries the gossip of other neighborhoods and the news from the entire outer world. When he alights from his horse and stretches his limbs he is quickly the center of a crowd of eager inquirers. Thus Courier-Journal.

Country Houses and English Gentry. There are a certain number of persons whose object it is to pass a certain number of months in the year in the country houses of their friends, to save the housereeping expenses at home and the hotel bills away from home, but with the exception of these cadgers country houses are a bore alike to their owners and to their owners' guests. The owners have not only to provide the guests with food and lodging and to weary their brains with attempts to amuse them, but they have to breed up at a heavy cost domes tic fowls, in order that gentlemen may make believe to be sportsmen by shooting them with all the accompaniments that luxury can provide. -London Truth.

La Grippe!

The tendency of this disease toward neumonia is what makes it dangerous La Grippe requires precisely the same treatment as a severe cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is famous for its cures of severe colds. This Remedy effectually counteracts the tendency of the disease to result in pneumonia, provided that proper care be taken to avoid exposure when recovering from the attack. Careful inquiry among the many thousands who have used this remedy during the epidemics of the past two years has failed to discover a single case that has not recovered or that has resulted in pneumonia. 25 cent, 50 cent and $1 bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton, drugglsts.
