THE BELLS BENEATH THE SEA.

The sea is calm, the wind is fair,
Nor ever a cloud doth lower—
The good ship speeds with the blessed is
She bears to Boltreaux tower.
The pilot crossed his breast, and cried:
"Thank God! the harbor's near.
For vesper bells at Tintage!
Ring out their music clear.

"Aye, thank the Lord for our good speed

Across the doubtful seal"
"Fool!" sneered the captain, "thank thyself:
God holds no belin for thee."
The pilot crossed his breast, and cried,
"God pardon thee once more. And grant that we may safely come Unto the Cornish shore."

The captain's oath was on his lips.
Or ever the sun went down.
And while the peopl@hronged the cliffs
Above the harbor town.
A mighty wave swept o'er the sea.
With dull and sullen roar;
The good ship trembled all her length
As she sank to rise no more.

Then o'er the whelming waters pealed (As tolling funeral knells For those lost souls) the soft, sweet chimes Of the Forrabury bells.

The moss creeps over Boltreaux church, Where rings no vesper lay;
Still waits the tower its blessed bells, And silent stands today.
For low beneath the Cornish wave, Where tangled wrecks lie deep.
The Forrabury bells are hid And their sweet echoes keep.
But ever 'gainst the billows toss, And storm winds shrick in glee;
Their muffled chimes the blessed bells Still ring beneath the sen. Still ring beneath the sea.

FOURTEEN MILES OF FEAR.

Ride Back End Foremost Over Strange Railroad Track by Night. "Funny, isn't it, what daredevil acts railroad men will often do?" asked a little traveling man of a few friends as he dropped into one of the Grand Pacific rotunda chairs.

"Yes, something like trying to run two trains on the same track or trying to see whether the rails or a man's leg is the hardest," suggested a fellow drum-

"No, I mean in the ordinary course of business. The other day I started for Washington and I had a premonition that the trip was not to be of the best, for on the way to the depot I purchased a pocket comb of a street vender, who a pocket comb of a street vender, who gave me a quarter too much change. We got as far as Auburn Junction and it was awful dark, when the station agent informed us that there was a wreck between us and Defiance, O. Later he said there were two wrecks and that three men had been killed. The debris was piled so high upon the tracks that it would take the wreckers hours to clear them. I saw our conductor and engineer in close conversation.

"Suddenly the conductor said, Bill, there is nothing left us but to run around on the Wabash tracks to Defiance.' "But the Wabash has no operator here to give us orders,' answered the en-

"'Oh, I'll cut you off and we'll turn the engine around at the roundhouse table and make our way over the fourteen miles of strange track. As long as your headlight shows up you can creep over the road, can't you?

"The knight of the throttle was a careful man, but he knew that the United States mail was being delayed and a couple of hundred passengers were angrily demanding that the trainmen do something to hurry them on. 'I'll go you,' he said, and the engine went down to the turntable to turn around. Upon coming back it was discovered that it would be impossible to couple her to the hind end of our train, as the sleeper draft were of a different pattern and higher than the coupler of the engine. Another panse for deliberation.

"Finally the conductor advised the engineer to go back, turn around and couple on in the original position. 'We'll just cross over on the spur and back up the fourteen miles.' And we did. That stretch of fourteen miles on a night as dark as pitch, over an unknown road, without a headlight and with 200 passengers unaware of the risk the trainmen were running to accommodate them and-well, I tell you it was exciting. No orders, no nothing, as you might say.

"I stood on the hind end, which was then the fore end, with the conductor and four brakemen, as we slowly dragged our way through the darkness. flagmen carried red lanterns and torpedoes to run ahead and flag should a train be heard approaching, but it was dollars to butternuts that had a headlight appeared around one of those unknown curves no one of our train could have reached the approaching train in time to prevent her from crashing into our train. I've done a little railroading in my time and have taken a train over some risky places, but that fourteen miles of backing up without orders, without a headlight to aid our progress and on a strange track, is about the most squeamish ride I ever traveled. That shows you how many risks a railroad man will take to please the travelers."-Chicago News.

A Charming Little Pet. A charming little foreign pet for the house is the suricate. This pretty creature, which, if we remember rightly, was among the number of Frank Buckland's animal companions, is an active and vivacious little fellow, some ten inches long, with greenish brown fur, large bright eyes, a short pointed nose and dainty paws, which, like the squiron's, are used as hauds, to hold, to handle and to ask for more. Eloquent in supplication, tenacious in retention, the suricate's paws are expressive, plaintive and wholly irresistible. The creature is made for a pet, and is so effectionate to its master that it can undergo any degree of "spoiling" without injury to its temper.—London Spectator.

Why the Grumbler Is Entertaining. No one offers the systematic grumbler the tax of sympathy. He does not want it, moreover. His woes and grievances are his stock in trade. It is an under stood thing that without them he would be a very dull fellow. As it is they save his reputation, and set the ball of small talk moving—no matter in what direc-tion.—All the Year Round.

Bronze, spoken of in the Bible as brass, is of very ancient origin. We have little or no notion how the ancients got copper; but in all probability large quanti-ties were formerly found in the metallic state, just as we find it now in the neigh-borhood of Lake Superior in America and Baikal lake in Siberia. This would Eastern States.

Death in a Big City.

The shadows of metropolitan life could scarcely have a more ghastly illustration than in the case of the corpse of the old man at a Greenwich street window. staring into the windows of the elevated cars for two days, the butt of the train men's Christmas time humor. A little while before was the killing and mangling of another man on the elevated almost immediately opposite a window where sat his wife and child looking innocently out and wondering who it was being carried away under the protecting

We are wont to look upon the extraor-dinary situations created by the novelist and playwright with satirical severity but the pen of Sue, Dumas, Dickens and of a host of imitators never conjured up from imaginations vivid with research and practical observation a more pa-thetically impressive picture than is pre-sented in the dead man at the Greenwich street window. Yet such things are so common in New York that they are swallowed up in the great maelstrom of metropolitan events—forgotten in a day. —New York Herald.

Dividends in Philadelphia.

The January payments of interest and dividends in this city are the heaviest of the year. Upon Jan. 1 interest matures on a large portion of the national debt, and the government pays the quarterly interest on the 4 per cents., about $5,596,000, and also $1,938,705 semiannual interest on the Pacific railroad bonds known as the "currency sixes." The semiannual interest on the debt of the city, due Jan. 1, is now being paid. The city interest due is $1,516,075, of which $589,772 goes into the city sinking fund. The principal of the city debt upon which interest is dis-bursed is $52,417,300. It is estimated that all the money paid in Philadelphia for January interest and dividends ex-ceeds $10,000,000.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Not alone are the bright, shiny green teas artifi-cially colored, but thousands of pounds of substitutes for tea leaves are used to swell the bulk of cheap teas; ash, sloe, and willow leaves being those most commonly used. Again, sweepings from tea warehouses are colored and sold as tea. Even exhausted tea leaves gathered from the tea-houses are kept, dried, and made over and find their way into the cheep teas.

The English government attempts to stamp this out by confiscation; but no tea is too poor for ue, and the result is, that probably
