Wasco county were laboring under the delusion that the Oregon delegation was opposed to the state making appropriations in the Columbia river because it would act as a hinderance to their obtaining appropriation for more permanent improvements from the general government. It is a matter of little importance any way one takes it, but the CHRONICLE never had any notion of the kind. We have always believed that the little portage at the cascades was one of the most powerful arguments our delegation could possibly use in their efforts to obtain appropriations for permanent improvements, and we believe so still.

The Primary Elections.

The republican primaries held in this city last Saturday were hotly contested and the result was almost a complete victory for the "citizens ticket," which elected twenty-six of the twenty-seven delegates. The delegation is beyond cavil a good one, taken as a whole, and is perhaps as representative as it could well be. The following are the names of the successful candidates:
