The Chronicle is not a party paper and is therefore not necessarily called upon to defend the character of the republican county ticket, but when men, whose sense of decency ought to teach them better, sneeringly refer to it as a "temperance ticket" it is right and proper to enter an earnest protest. Has it come to this that a man is to be politically ostracised because he cannot or will not drink liquor, not to say make a sot of himself? Is temperance a disqualification for office in Wasco county? It has been a subject of common remark that few men who have held the lucrative offices of this county for the past score of years have left them better off, financially, than when they entered upon their duties. Were the men in question any more respected on this account? We cannot think so. The sneer about a "temperance ticket" is in bad taste. The people certainly don't want an intemperance ticket and the name intended as opprobrious is the very highest compliment that could be paid it.

The prophecies of protectionists that if proper encouragement were extended to the tin industry, the United States could, in a reasonable time, produce its own tin, have commenced to be realized and the first consignment of 22,000 pounds of American tin arrived in New York a couple of days ago from the Tamesal mines in California. The tin is said to be of the best quality, equal to the foreign Straits and is only the advance guard of what is to follow. There can scarcely be a reasonable doubt that if the protection thrown around this infant industry by the McKinley law is allowed to work its way, in a comparatively short time the United States will produce her own tin, of as good quality as there is in the world, and at a lower price than we have ever paid for the imported article.

The Union county republicans held their county convention last Wednesday and among others adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we as republicans believe that the history of the republican party in the past has shown it to be a friend to all needed reform, therefore, we as members of this grand old party, do agree to discourage the use of intoxicating liquors in the coming campaign.

Whereas, The large fees and compensation allowed by the special law, giving sheriffs and clerks one-third additional compensation over and above the regular fees of other officers is unfair and imposes burdens upon the taxpayers of Union county. Therefore,

Resolved, That our candidates for the legislature are hereby pledged to use their utmost endeavors to secure the repeal of said laws at the next session of the legislature, and that our candidates for the offices of sheriff and clerk are pledged not to work or use their influence against the repeal of the same.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that a law should be enacted providing that all officials fees shall be paid into the county treasury and officials paid reasonable salaries.

The first of these resolutions has a particularly right ring about it. The Chronicle is in no sense a prohibition organ but it heartily says "God speed the day when character, efficiency and honesty will have more potency in a political campaign than a beer keg or a whiskey demijohn."

The following unanswerable argument is advanced by the Pasco Headlight as a reason for opening the Columbia and Snake rivers: "If God Almighty had not intended these rivers for some good purpose He never would have formed them. He could as easily have made them into sage brush or jack rabbits, but He didn't do it, and hence we must conclude they were made for steamboats, crocodiles and whales."

Mount Hood would make a magnificent public park or reservation and the project of having a large tract of government land around the base of the hoary old peak set apart for this purpose ought to succeed.

The largest building that ever was erected was the machine gallery at the Paris exhibition, which was exactly a quarter of a mile in length, with a span of 380 feet.

At the present day the Persians call asafetida "the food of the gods," the Russians delight in caviare and the Eskimos in train oil.

Goldendale continues to be troubled with a ghost that nightly plays its mysterious pranks upon the citizens. It has been cornered closely several times but always managed to escape. Quite a number of persons have been badly frightened and the Courier, believing it to be some crank who is simply bent on mischief, solemnly advises it to go to bed and avoid having a hole blown through it.

Incendiary Fires.
BERLIN, April 1.—An alarming series of fires, supposed to be incendiary origin, have occurred in the Cassel district of late. Four sawmills and eight houses have been destroyed at Kragehof, thirteen houses at Brandersen, ten at Grossenback and fourteen at Heidefeld. Several persons are missing, and are supposed to have perished in the flames and many cattle have been cremated.

Lost at Sea.
LONDON, April 1.—It is reported that ten lives have been lost through the wreck of the Norwegian steamer Louise, bound for the Lofden islands, near the famous maelstrom. The captain, first officer and chief engineer went down with the vessel. The survivors have reached Bergen.
