Aaron Burr's Eye. The late Miss Theodosia Burr Davis, of New York, was a dear friend of mine in the long, long ago days. The niece and ward of Matthew L. Davis, the intimate associate and biographer of Burr, she had a store of anecdotes of men who figured prominently in national affairs seventy or eighty years since, but this one—which I shall repeat as nearly as possible in her own words—interested me most of all. 'I was a schoolgirl of fourteen, spending a short vacation at Uncle Matthew's house in the city, when one day I heard him calling to me from the hall below and went to the head of the stairs. 'Come down,' he said. 'There is a gentleman here who wishes to see you.' I hesitated, held back by some undefinable fear. Again he said, 'Come down,' and in such tones that I dared not disobey. He led me into the parlor, and there on the sofa sat an old man whom I had never before seen. Very old he looked, dressed in the costume of the last century, with his snow white hair drawn back and tied in a cue behind. But his eyes—they were not old. Large, dark and deep, they flashed with all the fire of youth. I never saw such eyes in a man or woman. They fascinated while they frightened me. 'My uncle led me forward and said, 'Colonel Burr, this is the child of whom I spoke. I need not tell you whose name she bears. The old man rose, took my hand in his and held me out at arms length and looked at me—looked at me with those eyes which seemed to see into my very soul. Only a moment, but the moment was an hour. Then he dropped my hands and exclaimed in a voice trembling with emotion: 'Take her away, Matthew, take her away! I cannot bear it!' I saw him only once afterward; it was on Broadway, and I tried to slip by him unperceived. But when I turned to look back he was standing still, following me with those wonderful, wonderful eyes. They haunt me still, and will, I know, while memory lasts.'—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Macaulay as a Host. Macaulay was a pattern host. On his own account, it is true, he was no epicure, and his nephew tells us that at any time he would have been amply satisfied with a dinner such as is served at a decent seaside lodging house. This was a sad moral defect, but happily his conscientious views of the obligations of hospitality prevented his guests from suffering by it. He generally selected by a half-conscious preference dishes of established character and traditional fame. His dissenting friends he treated to a fillet of veal, "which he maintained to be the recognized Sunday dinner in good old Nonconformist families." On Michaelmas day he would have been wretched had no goose smoked on the board. At Christmas he never forgot the old historic turkey. If he was entertaining a couple of schoolboys who could construe the fourth satire of Juvenal, he would reward them for their proficiency with a dish of mullet that might have passed muster on the table of an angler or an emperor's freedman. With regard to the contents of his cellar, Macaulay prided himself on being able to say with Mr. John Thorp, "Mine is famous good stuff, to be sure," and if he were taken to task for his extravagance he would reply, in the words used by another of his favorite characters in fiction, that there was a great deal of good eating and drinking in 1700 a year, if people knew how to manage it.—All the Year Round.

The Seniors in War. One marked difference divided the generals of Frederick William III from those of Napoleon. The Duke of Brunswick was seventy-one years old, Prince Hohenlohe, sixty and among subordinate commanders were men of sixty eight, seventy and seventy-four. Lefebvre, the oldest French general, was barely fifty-one. Angereau, forty-eight; Bernadotte, forty-two; Napoleon, Ney, Soult and Launes, thirty-seven; Murat only thirty-five. Excepting for the intervention in Holland in 1797, and the Duke of Brunswick's ill starred invasion of Champagne in 1792, the Prussian army—like that of Great Britain in 1854—had suffered from a long peace, one of the results in each case being a certain disbelief in young commanders. Von der Decken, writing in 1798 under the title "Is it necessary that we should only have young generals?" decided the question in the negative; and in the British army today an officer of the same age as that of Napoleon or Murat at Jena may find his energies confined to the command of a company, whatever his capacity.—Edinburgh Review.

Claims Before Congress. Immediately after every change of administration, claims which were disallowed by the outgoing power pour in by thousands, to be considered and rejected again. Applicants imagine, evidently, that what one party will not grant the other may grant. Their persistence in many cases is astonishing. One citizen, who has not the shadow of a right to back him up, has written more than 1,000 letters to the treasury respecting his demand, and has expended more money in postage than the value of the claim. He has addressed his communications on the subject to every public official in Washington, from the president down, and even to the Chinese and other foreign ministers.—Washington Letter.

Went to Church Once. A Maine woman who had an irreligious husband kept driving at him until she finally got him to go to church. Now mark how she was rewarded. Instead of following the service he looked at the congregation and noticed how much more handsomely the other women were dressed than his wife. This fact pricked him to the heart as no words of the minister could, and the next day he gave his wife $500 and told her to go and buy some clothes. Need we enlarge on the moral of this story? We think not.—New York Tribune.

INDIA.

Ganges swells rippled in the fierce midday. Drenched in the white-hot sun's acrid fire. Winding its calm its turbid, indolent way Around Benares and its thousand spires. The monstrous crocodiles on either bank Loll in the sheen and watch the ichneumon creep. And 'mid the rushes and the tall grass rank Of fecal pools the huge flamingoes sleep. No sound, no stir, no pleasant dip of oars, No sail to charm the scene, no cloud of white; Naught but the stentor of the scorching shores, Naught but the wilderness of burning light. Master and slave have sought the shadeless lawn. The iris fish hide in the alga dense, With deadly beat the hell sun poureth down. Blinding a continent in its insolence. While o'er the slumbering waste of heat and sand, Where nothing human moves or sways or speaks: Far in the fertile distance, mute and grand, Rise the great Himalayas' icy peaks. —Francis S. Saltus. Didn't Lose Much. One day a gentleman named Fleming called on Mr. C., and both being members of the same society the conversation drifted in that direction. "You were not at the last meeting," said Mr. C. to Fleming. "No," replied the latter, "I was unavoidably absent. I have lost my wife." Now Mr. C., who was somewhat deaf, failed to hear the last remark, and said, emphatically, "Well, you didn't lose much!" referring, of course, to the meeting of the society. When Miss C., who was present, explained the situation, her father was overwhelmed with shame, and made most humble apologies. Fleming understood at once, and had no thought of being offended, as Mr. C. was known to be scrupulously polite and tenderly considerate.—Harper's.

Bad Blood.

Impure or vitiated blood is nine times out of ten caused by some form of constipation or indigestion that clogs up the system, when the blood naturally becomes impregnated with the effete matter. The old Sarsaparilla attempts to reach this condition by attacking the blood with the drastic mineral "potash." The potash theory is old and obsolete. Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla is modern. It goes to the seat of the trouble. It arouses the liver, kidneys and bowels to healthful action, and invigorates the circulation, and the impurities are quickly carried off through the natural channels. Try it and note its delightful action. Chas. Lee, at Seamish's Third and Market Streets, S. E., writes: "I took it for vitiated blood and while on the first bottle became convinced of its merits, for I could feel it was working a change. It cleansed, purified and braced me up generally, and everything is now working full and regular."

Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. For Sale by SNIPES & KINERSLY THE DALLES, OREGON. A Revelation. Few people know that the bright bluish-green color of the ordinary tea exposed in the windows is not the natural color. Unpleasant as the fact may be, it is nevertheless artificial; mineral coloring matter being used for this purpose. The effect is twofold. It not only makes the tea a bright, shiny green, but also permits the use of "off-color" and worthless teas, which, once under the green cloak, are readily worked off as a good quality of tea. An eminent authority writes on this subject: "The manipulation of poor tea, to give them a better appearance, is carried on extensively. Green tea, being in this country especially popular, are produced to meet the demand by coloring cheaper black kinds by glazing or facing with Prussian blue, tumeric, gypsum, and indigo. This method is so general that very little genuine uncolored green tea is offered for sale." It was the knowledge of this condition of affairs that prompted the placing of Beech's Tea before the public. It is absolutely pure and without color. Did you ever see any genuine uncolored Japan tea? Ask your grocer to open a package of Beech's, and you will see it, and probably for the very first time. It will be found in color to be just between the artificial green tea that you have been accustomed to and the black tea. It draws a delightful canary color, and is so fragrant that it will be a revelation to tea drinkers. Its purity makes it also more economical than the artificial tea, for less of it is required per cup. Sold only in pound packages bearing this trade-mark:
