AN ITALIAN OVEN

Contrivances That Prevent Dust, Smoke and Other Annoyances.

When the Italian cooking apparatus is used, neither dust, dirt, gas, smoke, heavy cake, soggy potatoes nor explosions rattle the temper. It is neither range nor simply stove. It looks like a tub covered with shining tiles of blue and white porcelain. It is a trifle high, and in order to operate it to the best advantage it is best to stand on a little foot-stool or platform. Under the stove is a semicircular closet reaching up to about half its height and holding from one to three sacks (about four bushels) of charcoal. On the top are one, two or three openings—little square, boxlike grates, sinking perhaps four or five inches and about eight inches square. Under the grates are receptacles with doors for ashes, and in the center is a larger receptacle for heating dishes.

Over the stove and about half way up the wall is a canopy, shaped like the stove at the bottom, but gradually narrowing to the top at the front and side until it is almost tunnel shaped, where it joins the chimney, is an opening into the chimney, about the size of a very small stovepipe. There is always a good draft without dampers.

For boiling, a few bits of cane are put in the square or grate over which the kettle or the saucepan is to be placed; then a shovelful of charcoal is put over the canes, a light is applied and, if you are in a hurry, over the hole is put a curious contrivance very like a stovepipe, perhaps two feet high, with a funnel at the top, a contrivance that is expressly known in Italian as “il diavolo” possibly because it starts the fire in such a marvellously short time.

If the articles to be boiled are vegetables, the kettle is placed directly over the grate, and “il diavolo” is laid upon the shelf above. If, however, something more delicate is to be cooked, a tripod about three inches high is put over the grate and the boiler is placed on that, so that there is not even a possibility of burning or scorching; then a circle of coals is put on the outside of the stove about the boiler, which is tightly covered. It takes from twenty minutes to half an hour to cook this way, and everything cooked is cooked all over.

For baking, the preliminary preparations are the same, but the dish holding the mixture is placed in an outer dish of block tin, and over it is put that wonderful magician, the “forno di campagna,” that looks like a peck or a half bushel measure, according to its size, made of sheet iron and inverted. There is an opening at one side, up which slips the handle of the baking tin or of the saucepan, and over which the form slips, settling firmly down on the stove.

Under the dish that contains the material to be baked is the charcoal fire in the grate; about it glowing coals are put and replenished before the glow dies out, and on top of the “forno” more glowing coals are placed and treated in the same way. Everywhere there is an equal diffusion of heat. Mince pie, sponge cake, custards, bread and turkeys are browned perfectly. The “forno” wasn't invented by an Italian, but by a Frenchman, and it would be quite possible to use it with our charcoal stoves.—New York Sun.

Scotland and the Thistle. The thistle was selected as the national emblem of Scotland in the year 1010. It was during the reign of Malcolm I that a notable invasion of the country was made by the Danes. They came in thousands, and landing on the coast swarmed over the inhabited districts like locusts, destroying, burning and plundering wherever they went. For safety the inhabitants fled to the castles and fortified towns, and among the most notable of the fortresses of Aberdeenshire was Stain's castle, where were collected a large number of people of the neighborhood. The Danes projected a surprise. Approaching the castle in the darkness they planned to scale its walls, and laid aside their shoes that the greater secrecy might be observed when drawing near to the fortifications.

The surprise might have been successful had it not been for the fact that, on descending into the dry moat, they found to their great discomfort and mortification, it was filled with thistles, by which their feet were so severely pricked that several made an outcry, which aroused the defenders of the castle and brought them to the wall in time to repel the onset. Regarding their good fortune in repelling the Danes as due to the thistles, these plants were immediately placed in the arms of Scotland and adopted as the emblem of the country.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Celebrated Dog.

Wordsworth and Scott both celebrated in their poems the famous old Gelert. This dog, a deerhound, was given by King John to his son-in-law Llewellyn, who kept him at his hunting lodge, in the neighborhood of the Welsh mountain Snowden. Gelert was missed one morning from the hunt by his master. Llewellyn, upon his return to the lodge, saw the dog, and discovered that its mouth was besmeared with blood. Concluding that the dog had devoured his child, the infuriated master slew the poor animal. Upon investigation, he discovered a dead wolf by the child's cradle, while the child was safely and soundly sleeping. The brave dog had saved Llewellyn's heir from the wolf. A monument was erected to the faithful creature, which bears the name of Beth-Gelert.—Harper's Young People.

How Negroes Detect a Scorpion. In Jamaica the negroes believe that scorpions know their names, so they never call out, “See, a scorpion,” when they meet with one on the ground or wall, for fear of his escaping. They thus indirectly recognize the scorpion's delicate appreciation of sound; but if you wish to stop a scorpion in his flight, blow air on him from the mouth, and he at once coils himself up. I have repeatedly done this; but with a spider it has a contrary effect.—London Spectator.

Set a Horse's Broken Rib.

Four or five months ago one of the hosters employed at the stable of Charles D. Nichols of Pavvtncket, noticed that one of the handsome pair of cream geldings acted a little lame. A superficial examination of the shoulder resulted in not finding any cause for lameness. The next morning, when the animal was taken out to be curried, there was a swelling back of the shoulder and a veterinary surgeon was consulted. It appeared to him like rheumatism and with instructions to see if it could not be sweated out he left, saying he would call the next day. The sweating process did not meet the desired results, and a thorough examination revealed the fact that the fifth rib was broken off very close to the backbone.

The rib was set, and since that time the animal has done no work. The result of this piece of bonsetting has been watched with no small amount of interest by all veterinary surgeons hereabout who have become acquainted with the peculiar circumstances of the case. How the rib was broken is yet a mystery, and it probably will remain so. The result of the operation was successful, and in a short time the animal will again be all right.—Providence Journal.

Hearing of Horses.

It is well known that horses can hear deep sounds which we cannot. For days previous to the earthquake in the Rivera the horses there showed every symptom of abject fear, which continued without any change of character till the fury of the convulsion broke forth. But not till a few seconds before the earth began to quake did human beings hear any sounds, while it is extremely probable that the horses heard the subterranean noises for two or three days previously.—Boston Globe.

Bad Blood.

Impure or vitiated blood is nine times out of ten caused by some form of constipation or indigestion that clogs up the system, when the blood naturally becomes impregnated with the effete matter. The old Sarsaparilla attempt to reach this condition by attacking the blood with the drastic mineral "potash." The potash theory is old and obsolete. Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla is modern. It goes to the seat of the trouble. It cleanses the liver, kidneys and bowels to healthful action, and invigorates the circulation, and the impurities are quickly carried off through the natural channels.

Try it and note its delightful action. Chas. Lee, at Beamish's Third and Market Streets, S. F., writes: "I took it for vitiated blood and while on the first bottle became convinced of its merits, for I could feel it was working a change. It cleansed, purified and braced me up generally, and everything is now working full and regular."

A Revelation.

Few people know that the bright bluish-green color of the ordinary tea exposed in the windows is not the natural color. Unpleasant as the fact may be, it is nevertheless artificial; mineral coloring matter being used for this purpose. The effect is twofold. It not only makes the tea a bright shiny green, but also permits the use of "off-color" and worthless teas, which, once under the green cloak, are readily worked off as a good quality of tea. An eminent authority writes on this subject: "The manipulation of poor teas, to give them a finer appearance, is carried on extensively. Green teas, being in this country especially popular, are produced to meet the demand by coloring cheaper black kinds by gassing or faying with Prussian blue, tumeric, gypsum, and indigo. This method is so general that very little genuine uncolored green tea is offered for sale." It was the knowledge of this condition of affairs that prompted the placing of Beech's Tea before the public. It is absolutely pure and without color. Did you ever see any genuine uncolored Japan tea? Ask your grocer to open a package of Beech's, and you will see it, and probably for the very first time. It will be found in color to be just between the artificial green tea that you have been accustomed to and the black tea.

It draws a delightful canary color, and is so fragrant that it will be a revelation to tea drinkers. Its purity makes it also more economical than the artificial teas, for less of it is required per cup. Sold only in pound packages bearing this trade-mark:

BEECH'S TEA

"Pure As Childhood."
