MARKET REVIEW.

THE DALLES, APRIL 28, 1892.
The city market is lifeless. Business is fairly good in all lines, prices unchanged. The grocery market is in statu quo.

Produce and Merchandise Prices.

WHEAT—We quote 55 to 60 cents per bushel. Corn in sacks $1.40@1.50 per 100 lbs.
OATS—The oat market is in good supply with a limited demand. We quote 1.20 cents to 1.25 per cental.

STAPLE GROCERIES.

COFFEE—Costa Rica is quoted at 23 cents by the sack; Sugars—Chinese in 100lb mats, Dry Granulated, $6.34; Extra C, 5 1/2 cents C, 5 1/2 cents.

JERSEY BULL—St. Lambert.

The thoroughbred Jersey bull St. Lambert, will stand for the season at the Columbia Feed yard. For service apply to David George.

A Word to the Wise.

The best business opening and chance to make money in the state, is lying idle at Dufur, Or. A store 32x60 well furnished in a growing, and prosperous, farming community.

NEVER SATISFIED.

DISCONTENT THE POWER THAT PUSHES US UPWARD AND ONWARD.

One Step in Advance Encourages Man-kind to Try for Greater Advance—The Problem of Progress Into Which the Thoughtful Man Sees Deeply.

Eager, enthusiastic and sanguine people always expect to feel unbounded satisfaction in the actual possession of that which they strive for. The boy longs to be a man, the youth craves independence; one looks forward to marriage as his ideal of bliss, another yearns for wealth, one covets position, another power; one hungers for knowledge, another for skill; one sighs for opportunity, another for ability.

When this goal is reached, and it often is, how are these sanguine expectations realized? Is the mind content and satisfied? Is the pleasure unsullied? Do the glowing colors continue as bright as before? Does their buoyancy receive no check? They have gained their point, but have they realized what they anticipated? Has the success been so very successful after all?

Probably most of those who have had these experiences will have to confess that while in the first flush of possession all was joyful excitement, yet in a short time that feeling gave way to a calmer and more dispassionate view of its value. Certain flaws and defects that would have been utterly scouted became apparent; it grew to be a commonplace and ordinary possession, and however unwilling they might be to part with it, yet it was no longer upon that, but upon other things still out of reach that their interest and enthusiasm were centered.

Mr. Philip Hamerton, speaking of the present attitude of the French people toward a republican form of government, gives an apt illustration of this truth. He says: "The republican sentiment, though resolute as to the preservation of republican forms, has certainly become wonderfully cool. The coolness of the young men is especially remarkable and significant. They are mostly republicans, it is true, and have no belief in the possibility of a monarchical restoration, but the more intelligent of them see the difficulties and the defects of a republican government very plainly, and they have a tendency to dwell upon those difficulties and defects in a manner that would astonish the militant republicans of the past. This composed and rational temper is the state of mind that comes upon all of us after the settled possession of an object, and it is a sign of possession. Most of us can cite instances to match this both in public and private affairs nearer home.

The chief point to be considered, however, is whether this result is or is not to be deplored. Some regard it among the bitter experiences of life, showing merely the transitory and shallow nature of all happiness and the fatality of all hopes. "Of what use is it," they say, "to strive and labor for that which, when attained, loses its power of blessing and cheering us? Why encourage an enthusiasm that must fade away and hold up an ideal that is presently to be trodden under foot?" So they sink into pessimism and come to believe that all is vanity and vexation of spirit. But the thoughtful and intelligent man sees far deeper into the problem than this. He has discovered that in this very truth, held to be so mournful, lies the kernel of all progress.

All the rose colored hopes that we indulge, all the attractive future spread out in such fair proportions to our imagination, lure us on to energy and effort. What does it matter that we exaggerate its importance, that we expect impossible effects from it, that all its defects and disadvantages are entirely hidden from our sight? Were it not so, how much of our striving would come to an end! And when we attain these objects, what more natural than that, the excitement of pursuit being over and the tension of mind relaxed, a calmness of spirit should follow and an ability to judge of its excellences and its disadvantages more dispassionately and more correctly.

Suppose the enjoyment is less keen and the satisfaction less complete than we had anticipated. Should the mere pleasure felt in success be the main object of our striving? Satisfaction indeed can only be a transient emotion to an intelligent and advancing man or woman. Were it a permanent condition of mind there could be no further progress. Take, for example, the youth who longs for a higher education and tries, through many obstacles, to obtain it. At length the opportunity comes, and his wishes are crowned with success. Yet his delight, at first very keen, gradually subsides into a calm serenity. He comes by degrees to understand the meaning of his opportunity, its difficulties, its sacrifices, its labor and the new field of hope and aspiration which it opens up. He no longer rests satisfied with the opportunity for which he longed; his enthusiasm now takes another form; his hopes are raised to a higher level; his energies are engaged in taking advantage of the fortunate occasion, and he now looks with equal earnestness to the time when he shall have finished his course and begun the life work which he has planned. And when that time comes he will go through the same experience. His glad enthusiasm will be transferred to a still higher altitude, and his new ideal will draw him still onward and upward. Is there anything sad or bitter in such an experience? Is there any loss of real happiness in this fading away of temporary pleasure? It is indeed the only road to happiness that is worthy of a noble man. It is the way that happiness nobly, that is, the way that happiness nobly follows the vigorous law of the faculties and the constant pressing upward to higher and higher attainments.

Estimating the Food Fish.

The cupidity of the fisherman on the Atlantic coast is rapidly destroying nearly every kind of sea food upon which the people have been accustomed to rely. The complaints of the men who control the fish markets are long and loud that the supply of fish is much less for this season than it was the last. The lobster factories on the Maine coast are all closed, and one has to go down as far east as Prince Edward island to find a lobster with a shell on his back at a fair price. The herring factories have begun to exhaust the immense schools of herring that gather around Grand Manan and work their way into the Bay of Fundy.

The mackerel have been so scarce during the season, from the wholesale destruction of schools, that a single mackerel is today more expensive than a pound of beef. The bluefish are still plenty, but there are signs that even this species of fish is beginning to be preyed upon by the methods employed by the fishermen in catching them. The fishermen say that they are obliged to use these destructive methods in order to protect themselves from the encroachments of those who refuse to keep to the old methods, and so the wholesale destruction goes on without restraint.

The time has come when if the sea is to yield to us much longer the delicious food which makes life on the Atlantic coast a delight to the people of the west, as well as to the natives, different methods of catching the fish, and a protection for them in the close season, must be established by law, for which the proper enforcement must be arranged. The necessity is urgent. There is not a single species of fish used for the table which is not now in great danger of extinction. The salmon and the shad have been protected, but protection is equally demanded for the cod, the herring, the lobster and the mackerel.

CONSTITUTION.

Afflicts half the American people yet there is only one preparation of Sarsaparilla that acts on the bowels and reaches this important trouble, and that is Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. It relieves it in 24 hours, and an occasional dose prevents return. Write for permission to C. E. Elkington, 125 Locust Avenue, San Francisco; J. H. Brown, Petaluma; H. S. Wynn, Geary Court, San Francisco, and hundreds of others who have used it in constipation. One letter is a sample of hundreds. Elkington, writes: "I have been for years subject to bilious headaches and constipation. Have been so bad for a year but have had to take a physic every other night or else I would have a headache. After taking one bottle of J. V. S., I am in splendid shape. It has done wonderful things for me. People similarly troubled should try it and be convinced."

Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla

Most modern, most effective, largest bottle, same price, $1.00, six for $5.00. For Sale by SNIPES & KINERSLY THE DALLES, OREGON.

A Severe Law.

The English people look more closely to the genuineness of these staples than we do. In fact, they have a law under which they make seizures and destroy adulterated products that are not what they are represented to be. Under this statute thousands of pounds of tea have been burned because of their wholesale adulteration.

Tea, by the way, is one of the most notoriously adulterated articles of commerce. Not alone are the bright, shiny green teas artificially colored, but thousands of pounds of substitutes for tea leaves are used to swell the bulk of cheap teas; ash, sloe, and willow leaves being those most commonly used. Again, sweepings from tea warehouses are colored and sold as tea. Even exhausted tea leaves gathered from the tea-houses are kept, dried, and made over and find their way into the cheap teas.

The English government attempts to stamp this out by controlling it, but no tea is too poor for us, and the result is, that probably the poorest tea used by any nation are those consumed in America.

Beech's Tea is presented with the guaranty that it is uncolored and unadulterated; in fact, the sun-cured tea leaf pure and simple. Its purity insures superior strength, about one third less of it being required for an infusion than of the artificial teas, and its fragrance and exquisite flavor is at once apparent. It will be a revelation to you. In order that its purity and quality may be guaranteed, it is sold only in pound packages bearing this trade-mark:
