The people of The Dalles are offered a rare treat in the entertainment to be given by Miss Hamillat the M. E. Church tomorrow night. On his way the doctor will attend a meeting of the Missouri state medical association. He intends to visit Chicago, New York and Washington and will be gone about a month.

Miss Hamill, assisted by her two classes in elecution, will give an entertainment in the basement of the M. E. Church tomorrow evening. The pupils have been preparing for this entertainment for some time, but ou account of the Court house being engaged for that evening expected to be compelled to give it up. Now that the M. E. Church has been kindly offered, all will have the opportunity of hearing the rendering of a first class programme.

A'brass band has been organized in the city, and one of the oldest and most accomplished musicians in the state of Oregon, who is also a member of it, has christened it the "Regulator Brass Band" and the name is going to stick. The new band has ten members, all ac-complished musicians, and before many days pass it is expected they will let themselves be heard on the public chronicle job office on short notice and at reasonable prices.

It is very evident the good people on the north side of the river are not partieularly stuck on Oregon sheep. John O'Leary of Rutledge, whose experience we related in the CHRONICLE a couple of weeks ago, tried to cross his band of sheep, a short time ago, over what is the Klickitat river. As the sheep approached the bridge the herder was met by four masked men who began shooting promiscuously all around them. The only thing injured, however, was the shepherd's dogs, a fine animal which had one of his legs broken by a pistol ball. Notices have been stuck up at several places warning the sheep men that no sheep will be allowed to pass and signed "Committee." It is altogether likely that Oregon sheepmen who intend to summer their flocks in Washthe above related that they may know what to expect.

The Columbia River Fruit Company. Whatever opinion others may entertain, the writer has unlimited faith in the future of the section of Wasco county bordering on the Columbia river, as a fruit country. We have long passed the experimental stage and are able to present scores of instances where even the most unpromising locations have yielded rich returns for intelligent labor. The tons and tons of dried and green fruit consumed at home or shipped out of the county annually, abundantly prove that we can raise fruit and plenty of it, and fruit too, some classes of which have no superior any where on the American continent: We predict that before many years have passed the hills and valleys for miles back of The Dalles and back of the Columbia river will be one continuous orchard and vineyard. That such is not the case at present is fully accounted for by the fact that it takes time and capital to raise fruit on an extensive scale, under the most favorable circumstances. In this direction the Columbia River Fruit company has been doing a work on the old Lair Hill ranch and on the adjoining farm which the company purchased last year from Rev. W. H. Wilson, which was a surprise to the writer as he walked and drove over it a tew days ago. The lands covered by these two farms comprise 1,460 acres, in addition to about 1,200 acres on the other side of the river. A force of between twenty and thirty men, under a competent overseer, have been at work since last fall clearing the land, plowing and planting fruit trees and grape vines. About 130 acres are now in bearing, or will bear fruit this coming season. Seventy-five acres have been planted during the fall and spring, and about 100 acres more are ready for plantwinter. The amount of work already accomplished, which can be seen by anyone who takes the trouble of a short ride up Mill creek, is an earnest of what are assured, has no lack of capital and it At the bottom is a silvered reflector, an Glavey and Tom O'Neil of Dufur were in has disposed of nearly all of its 2500 the cover forms a parabolic reflector, in Another splendid rainfall, that seems to dispose of at present. The progress of the company will be watched with much interest. Its success, and we know of no curious fungus that actually grows from reason why it should not succeed, is of a species of caterpillar. Unlikely as it immense import to this city, and to the may seem, this fungus literally transholder of every acre of fruit land in the forms the caterpillar into a vegetable, recently visited with an epidemic of neighborhood. Only by such methods measles and at least as many as 150 cases can orchards be planted on an extensive agency but all the patients under the care of the agency physician recovered.

Dr. Hugh Logan will leave on the midnight passenger tonight to attend a mediate neighborhood.

Slips That Always Ruise a Laugh To few of us is it given never to make a slip of the tongue. On the contrary, most people have some unpleasant memory or other of some dreadful mistake they have fallen into, and even although years may have passed since the fatal moment when their lips betrayed them, known as Outlet Bridge, on a branch of they are still unable to recall the circumstances without again experiencing the agony and their cheeks displaying the blush which followed upon the first discovery of the slip. Take a few examples to illustrate what we have advanced. It was but a very small and even insignificant change of a letter which rather spoiled the impressive eloquence of a preacher, who, warning his audience against idolatry, in place of "Bow not thy knee to an idol," made a false step and said, "Bow not thine eye to a needle."

In the same way the young clergyman with the correct Oxford pronunciation ington are going to get into trouble, and in giving the hymn, "Conquering Kings," merely stumbled over the first vowel but being unable to save himself was hurried over the precipice and startled his congregation with the announce-ment, "The hymn tonight will be 'Kinquering Congs, Kinquering Congs." Much the same was the pitfall into which a reverend gentleman walked when in place of saying "Behold the fig tree, how it withereth away," by a simple transposition of two letters he asked his audience to "Behold the wig tree, how it fithereth away."—London

The Sad Part of It.

A good soul in Ohio absolutely worships Dickens, even going so far as burning a candle before his portrait. She reads nothing but Dickens, and when he came here to read she wrote to inquire whether he'd visit the west. Receiving a reply in Dickens' own handwriting, her joy knew no bounds. Her hero could not leave the east, therefore she determined to go to New York.

Jones, the husband, demurred, but upon being wakened one night with the threat that if he did not give her money to travel like a Christian, she would walk, Jones succumbed. Mrs. Jones went to New York, had a private interview with Dickens, attended his readings, and returned home more rabid than

When the news came of Dickens' death Mrs. Jones was inconsolable. Not long after Mrs. Jones' sister died, but owing to the illness of this sister's husband, whom she was obliged to nurse, Mrs. Jones could not attend the funeral. When the rest of her family returned they found Mrs. Jones reading "Pickwick" to the sick and bereaved man. As relative approached the bed, Mrs. Jones burst into tears, exclaiming: "The saddest part of it all is to think that dear Sarah died before I had finished reading 'Martin Chuzzlewit' to her; and now she'll never, never know how it ends! Oh, it's too bad!"-Kate Field's
