THE MILLION DOLLAR MANTLE.

A Priceless Garment That Has Enveloped the Forms of Hawaiian Kings. valuable collection of Hawaiian feather war cloaks and capes is on exhibition at the National museum. One of the cloaks, the largest in the collection, is of immense value. It is known as the "million dollar mantle." It once enveloped the kingly form of Kekuaska-lian, one of the highest chiefs of the Sandwich islands, in whose reign it was completed nearly a hundred years after it was begun. Upon the death of Kekuaskalian, who fell in battle, it became the property of his enemy, King Kamehameha III, by whom it was presented to Captain J. H. Aulick, of the United States navy.

The foundation of this most remarkable cloak is a network of clona or "native hemp," and to it are attached by threads of the same material feathers of TRANSACT A GENERAL BANKING BUSINES native birds found only in the Hawaiian islands. The entire body of the mantle is made up of small red and yellow-feathers, the latter ones being obtained from the Oo or Uho (Moo nobilis), a bird extremely rare and possessing but one or two of these yellow feathers which are found under the wings. This bird is captured alive by means of the "lime trap," and when deprived of the precious feathers is set at liberty. Great prize is put on these feathers by the They are used as money in buying and selling, and are accepted by the government in payment of taxes. The red feathers are obtained from the most abundant bird of the islands, the Dreponis coccinea.

In the "million dollar mantle" the feathers are placed so as to overlap, thus giving a smooth surface to the exterior of the cloak. The upper and lateral borders of the mantle are decorated with alternate tufts of red, yellow and black feathers, but only on the margin are the black feathers used, which are obtained from the Uho. In the center of the mantle is a large crescent shaped figure of yellow feathers, surrounded by a belt of red, which blends in the middle of the belt on either side with a succeeding stripe of red, the outer margins of which are divided by two wedge shaped processes of yellow.

From this last named figure on either side to the circumferences are alternate parallel stripes of yellow and red about six inches broad. The upper circum-ference of the cloak, where it fastens about the neck, is about twenty inches the lower one being seven or seven and a half feet, thus forming a cloak capable of amply enveloping a very large person. The mantle is protected by a handsome case and its beauty advantageously displayed by a background of blue vel-

There are two other capes in the collection, very much smaller, and two boss. The larger of the capes is little more than a collar, its upper and lower circumferences being but seventeen and sixty-six inches, respectively. The entire body is of yellow feathers, having but two small crescents of red in the center.

The remaining cape, virtually a red one, has only two small designs of yellow feathers and consequently is much less valuable.

The feather garments were at one time considered the greatest possessions of the crown, but the costumes of En. ropean and American manufacture have superseded them, and they are no longer manufactured on the islands.-Washington Post.

Practical Uses of Wood. Witch hazel is a large and curious for-est shrub. The small branches were formerly used for "divining rods," and an extract from it is valued in medical practice. The wood of the American aspen or white poplar is used in the manufacture of paper - Home and

OREGON LIME

This lime is manufactured by The Oregon Marble and Lime Company, near Huntington, Oregon, and has earned the reputation of being the strongest lime in the market, and consequently, in addition to making the best work is at an equal price, the cheapest to the user. The following analysis by W. G. Jenne, chemist, Portland, Oregon, is worthy of consideration:

In fact, all the leading brands of fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars. Give the old man a call and you will come again. Two Kinds of Courage.

In some of the everyday occurrences of life women exhibit much more moral courage than men. You can see that on the "L" cars if you use your eyes. When a man retains his seat while a woman endeavors to maintain her balance by hanging to a strap in front of him, he generally makes a pretense of not seeing her. If he has a paper with him he will appear to be absorbed in its perusal. If he cannot avail himself of that convenient screen, he will pretend to be engaged in such deep meditation as to be oblivious to all that is going on around him. In one way or another he will betray the fact that his conscience is making a coward of him and that he is trying to cheat it.

It is very different with the average woman. Who that travels much in the "L" cars hasn't seen her often drop her child into a seat that has just been vacated, while women in various stages of weariness are standing up all around her? She has paid no fare for the child; she could very well continue to hold it in her lap; she knows that she is making some woman stand who would otherwise get a seat. But is she abashed? Does she act as if she were ashamed of herself? Does she seek to avoid the glances that are bestowed upon her by hiding her face behind a newspaper? Not a bit of it. She doesn't let her conscience make a coward of her. She looks the people about her square in the eyes without flinching. She says, or rather seems to say, "Well, I know that you don't like it; but what are you going to do about it?"

If this isn't moral courage what would you call it?-New York Herald.

Tea, by the way, is one of the most notoricusly adulterated articles of commerce. Not alone are the bright, shiny green teas artificially colored, but thousands of pounds of substitutes for ten leaves are used to swell the bulk of cheap tea-; asb, sloe, and willow leaves being those most commonly used Again, sweepings from tea warehouses are colored and sold as tca. Even exhausted tea leaves gathered from the tea-houses are kept, dried, and made over and find their way into the chesp teas.

The Euglish government attempts to stamp this out by confiscation; but no tea is too poor for us, and the result is, that probably the poorest teas used by any nation are those consumed in America.

Beech's Tea is presented with the guaranty that it is uncolored and unadulterated; in fact, the sun-cured tea leaf pure and simple. Its purity insures superior strength, about one third less of it being required for an infusion than of the artificial teas, and its fragrance and exquisite flavor is at once apparent. It will be a revelation to you. In order that its purity and quality may be guaranteed, it is sold only in pound packages bearing this trade-mark:
