The announcement is made, on the authority of the Wall Street Journal, that the management of the Union Pacific has passed absolutely into Boston hands. Hereafter all the board and executive committee meetings will be held in Boston.

will follow the international silver convention continue to be conflicting. In many European financial circles the belief prevails that no satisfactory results will follow. Germany accepts the invitation to attend the conference because she does not wish to stand aloof from the other powers. The German government and reichstag have always been opposed to bi-metalism. Only a few year ago they rejected a motion declaring Germany's willingness to negotiate if England previously adopted bi-metal-

the Methodist conference held at Omaha a report was submitted, "fairly bristling" with denounciation of the outrages practiced on the negroes in the South. It called on the government, the states, the church and all good citizens to rise and abolish these outrages. The resolution declared that the colored people were treated shamefully on the trains, in hotels, and shot down like dogs, and the law of the land trampled underfoot by people who despised the colored race. This sounds remarkably like a campaign document and yet so far from its being regarded in that light it was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

Notwithstanding the very general impression that Harrison will have a practical walk-over in the nomination for the presidency, Chairman J. S. Clarkson claims that there are seven millions of republicans who will be represented at the Minnepolis convention who have not yet made up their minds whom they will vote for. Clarkson claims that there will be more uninstructed dele- noted the growth of the war canoe, progates at the convention than has ever pelled by paddle entirely, and the sport been in the history of the republican had by a few races with them has created party and that all the Northern states and states which cast electoral votes which will elect have not instructed their delegates. It is not surprising, therefore, that Mr. Clarkson should conclude that more than one ballot will are a few fairly large paddling canoes be cast before the choice of the convention is declared.

The finger of destiny points steadily away from La Grande, the home of the apostle of free wool and taxed woolens. The political weather bureau predicts a cyclone in that region on the 6th of June and the vortex of the storm will June and the vortex of the storm will gattas of the summer would be made gather its fiercest whirl for the landing doubly interesting by these large canoe of the Slater craft high upon the head waters of Salt Creek. General G. W. Bell visited La Grande the other night. His coming had been heralded by the usual flaming announcements, anent the eloquent, silver tongued expounder of Simon pure tariff reform. He came, but the faithful refused to be enthused and the audience was so small and insignificant that the great man absolutely refused to speak. If this thing is done in La Grande what may be expected attracted to the minister, who had gone elsewhere? It is the handwriting on into convulsions. the wall and its interpretation is "James H., you have been weighed in the bal-ance and found it to be a back number."

There is trouble shead for the Presbyterians, no matter what disposition the Portland assembly may make of Dr. Briggs. Aside from the truth or falsity of his views, it is beyond question they are out of harmony with those that have prevailed in that body ever since the time of its great founders. Calvin and Knox. His retention as an accredited teacher of the denomination is a mensee to its peace. His expulsion, while undoubtedly a lesser evil, is sure to awaken sympathy on his behalf scarcely less menacing. It is certain, at least, that the seminary of which he is a professor will stand by him and the influence of its allumni is widespread and import-ant. At a banquet given by the Union

He Carried a Muff.

The other day a well dressed man sat in a Benlevard car going up town. The day was cold, the car was full and the usual discomforts of surface transit were turned en. The man mentioned was the observed of all observers. He carried a common black muff on his knee, his hands thrust in either end, and had a far away look in his eyes. The ladies exchanged amused glances. The gentlemen regarded the must with vari-eus degrees of wonder and contempt. "Newest style," suggested one gentleman to another. "Yes; it's going to be a cold day tomorrow. When you see the pigs carrying straws"

"That beats me!" came in a stage hisper from across the way. "Wonder if he wears corsets," said another.

"What is it, anyhow?" "Sorry I forgot my muff."
"Til steal my wife's sealskin sacque tonight."

im home safely." Amid these remarks the man with the must sat quietly looking out of the window. He must have overheard some of them; he must have known that he was the object of universal curiosity and ridicule, but he gave no sign. It appeared, however, that he was only collecting himself for some final effort, for when he arose to leave the car at Seventy-second street he suddenly confronted his fellow passengers.

"This is my wife's muff," he said bluntly. "She left it on the bargain counter. I had to go back and get it. Opinions regarding the results that I'm taking it home. If you see anything will follow the international silver confunny in that I'm blamed if I do."— New York Herald.

An Interesting Law Sult.

A law suit over a meteorite has stirred the usually tranquil life of Kirchberg, in Wurtemberg. Some time ago every body there was startled one night by a loud report, and a ball of fire was seen to fall near the Rennecker sawmill. On the next day a stone weighing a ton was found among the logs by a laborer in the mill. News of the occurrence was published far and wide. Among the scores of pilgrims to the stone among the logs were wise men from Stuttgart and Tubingen, who believed that they had a rare specimen of celestial geologihad a rare specimen of celestial geological formations. Their competitive offers for the stone bred a quarrel between the laborer and the owner of the mill as to whether the finder of the stone or the owner of the land on which it fell could be a cres under irrigation. Two good dwellings and out buildings. Price, $8,-000; half in stock, horses cattle or sheep. For further particulars Apply to HUGH GOUKLAY, 6-2tf Chronicle office, The Dalles. whether the finder of the stone or the owner of the land on which it fell could claim it rightfully.

Tubingen professors had it shipped to the university, after having agreed to psy $500 for it if it proved to be a duly tested and accredited meteorite. The laborer thereupon enjoined the mill owner from receiving the money for the stone, and the mill owner got a lawyer, who is trying to raise the injunction. Meantime, the Tubingen professors have said that the stone has few attributes of meteorite, and have refused to reship it; so laborer and mill owner are about to begin proceedings to compel them to return it, both maintaining that the university is trying to get the meteorite for nothing.

There are four lawyers in the case already and nothing has been decided, so the costs bid fair to exceed the value of a dozen meteorites.-New York Sun.

Something New in Canoe Racing. In the last couple of seasons we have something of an interest in paddling races generally, which were giving away very extensively to the sailing events. There is now some talk of building enlarged war canoes, to hold from a dozen to thirty or so, and racing them. There heretofore on moonlight and other nights as mediums for the introduction of the gentler sex to the fascinations of the sport. These may be manned for racing, and, per contra, the ones contemplated for racing may, on occasion, be sacrificed to love and beauty. In either event, it looks as though the re-

The Rev. W. D. Shea made a narrow escape in Macon Wednesday night. He went to a restaurant for some oysters and swallowed a piece of shell, which very near cost him his life. The shell lodged in his throat, lacerating the membrane and causing hemorrhage and strangulation. The saveral present were strangulation. The several pres

A physician was immediately dispatched for, but in the meantime the shell became dislodged and was thrown up during the convulsions. The shell was about the size of a quarter of a dollar, with sharp edges. After being relieved of the difficulty the Rev. Mr. Shes soon revived. His throat was considerably lacerated and alterether the siderably lacerated, and altogether the minister had a narrow escape.—Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer-Sun.
