THE OMAHA ASSEMBLY

Jupiter Pluvius Reigneth Ruined Silk Tiles Again.

DAVIDS' IMPRECATORY PSALMS.

The Continued Storms Worse Upon Farmers than Visitors.

AN OMAHA HANGING POSTPONED.

People Were Opposed to an Execution During the Conference Session—Etc.

OMAHA, May 27.—Once more Jupiter Pluvius has covered the Omaha sky with clouds and is covering the earth with moisture. Dripping umbrellas and ruined silk tiles are again abundant. Some of the less godly delegates feel like reading some of David's imprecatory psalms against the weather. It is discouraging to visitors and worse on the farmers. But prophets say it is the "clearing up shower" today. Previous to the presence of so many pious people in Omaha, a murderer was sentenced by the United States court to be hanged here today, but President Harrison granted a respite of thirty days at the request of citizens who are not willing to have a hanging bee during the session of the general conference. It is safe to say that such a thing never happened before and no murderer has lived thirty days longer because of a religious assembly. And the saloons are being closed on Sunday and at night as they have never before for a long time, if ever. Whether this is to give Omaha a better name or to keep the delegates from temptation is not reported. Anyhow, the effects of this general conference are quite visible. Apart from its mischievous work in connection with the floods and the crops the weather of the last three weeks has been remarkable in many ways. The public is prepared to stand a reasonable number of spring showers and is even willing to spend its outdoor life in mackintoshes and overshoes one day out of four. In the present spring, however, the rain has fallen on all four days and has even thrown in a few extra showers on the fifth in order to give good measure. This persistent dripping on the public's head is not conducive to health, however, and if the weather will clear up now the exceedingly unsatisfactory character of the May days thus delivered will be overlooked. The really remarkable nature of the season is the more apparent that the sun seems to have contributed to it neither light nor heat. Owing to this delinquency, the days have been not only wet, but dark, raw, chilly, depressing and autumnal. The satisfactory prospect that it must soon stop raining because all the clouds will be wrung dry will be greeted with joy by the multitudes who are awaiting a chance to go out of doors without getting drenched for their audacity.

A Level Headed Man.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Spencer Barker, visiting at Rifton, N. Y., was carried over the falls of Wallkill creek, 45 feet high yesterday. He was boat riding above the falls and lost control of the canoe, which drifted helplessly toward the falls. Just as the boat reached the brink he gave a jump over the falls, clearing the rocks below and striking deep water. Those who witnessed the scene were horrified, expecting never to see him alive again. After going under the water three times, he struck out and reached the shore in an exhausted condition. The boat was dashed to pieces. Baker is the only person who has ever gone over the falls and come out alive.

Sunday at the World's Fair.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 27.—In the general assembly of the United Presbyterian church met in its regular session yesterday, a resolution was passed expressing a hope that congress would appropriate money for the world's fair only on condition that it be closed on Sundays, and the sale of liquor be prohibited on the grounds.

Blowing up Levees.

MEMPHIS, May 27.—A private dispatch from Gunnison, Bolivar county, Miss., says: "The levee guards shot and killed a man last night who was attempting to blow up the levee with dynamite at Dennis' landing. We have his dynamite, fuse and pistol. He was a white man." His name is not reported.

Cleveland Will Withdraw.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—It will be a blessed thing when the conventions are over, and people can get a rest from the daily mess of political twaddle which now fills the newspapers of the land from Maine to Mexico, to the exclusion of better reading. Between Blaine and Harrison on one side, and Cleveland and Hill on the other side, there is no limit to the perversion and the perversions of interview. To such extent has this proceeding gone, sensible men of both leading political parties avoid the bore if possible, but the persistent interviewer follows the man, even to the quiet of his bed chamber, in the hope of securing materials with which to satiate the morbid craving for this species of news. The latest pretended interviews are with Congressman Hisecock, who is made to say: "Blaine will accept if nominated, and I am sure he will be nominated. He will write no more letters of declination. While not quite as well as I expected to find him, he is improving daily. I am satisfied he will be strong enough to undergo a presidential campaign." The next is what Senator Stanford is supposed to say: That "Mr. Blaine told me two months ago that his health would not bear the strain of a campaign." Matt Quay couldn't get through Pittsburg yesterday until he replied to the anger: "Sentiment is strong for Jas. G. Blaine; he is the talk of the hour; all over the country everything indicates that he will be nominated without any trouble. Not by stampeding the convention, but by force of general sentiment." On the other side the work is equally as brisk. The democrats have divided into three classes, according to the Post: "Those who do not know when to speak, those who do not know when to be silent and Mr. Henry Watterson, who does not know either of these moments." The public has been requested by Mr. Henry Watterson to believe that Grover Cleveland, who has a fat roll of indorsements from various state conventions, will withdraw from the contest.

Vanderbilts' Condition.

NEW YORK, May 26.—It is feared that Cornelius Vanderbilt's mind may become unbalanced because of his grief for the death of his son, William H. He is watched constantly, and at night some one sits up in his bedroom. The distracted father is utterly prostrated, and though his real condition has not been made known to the public, the information comes to the press through an unquestionable source that his mind has been seriously affected by the shock of bereavement. Chauncey M. Depew has been almost constantly at the Vanderbilt mansion since the young heir's death, and has been much in the company of the stricken father; in giving information to the press he has little to say concerning Mr. Vanderbilt's feelings. Dr. James McLane, the family physician, when asked about the reported mental derangement of Vanderbilt, said Mr. Vanderbilt is much prostrated and is a great sufferer, but it is not true that he has become deranged. He slept soundly last night from exhaustion, and there was no watcher in his room.

Ohio Waterspout.

NILES, May 27.—A waterspout burst over Kinsman, a small village twelve miles north of this city on the Pymatuning river yesterday. The water fell in torrents from four o'clock till a few minutes after six, and the small river overflowed its banks. Damages would have been comparatively trifling had not a dam about two miles above the village broke without warning, drowning six persons and destroying buildings, stock and crops.

Lead In By Temptation.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—One arrest for opium smuggling has been made on the Paebia, that of Mrs. Baenbach, stewardess of the steamer. One of the inspectors was ordered to watch the women connected with the steamer, as they had been on very friendly terms with the firemen and would probably try to smuggle opium, if there was any on board.

HIDES AND LEATHER.

Present Condition of the Leather Market Demoralizing.

SOUTH AMERICAN SUPPLY CUT OUT.

Effect Which the Weather has Upon the Boot and Shoe Trade.

TANNERS AFRAID OF EACH OTHER.

The Bulls and Bears-Hides Advance While the Tanners Were in Convention.

CHICAGO, May 27.—The closing of the tanneries for sixty days because of an overproduction of leather recalls a previous effort of this kind and illustrates the method. Several years ago there was a meeting in Chicago which was attended by representative tanners from all over the United States. Prices were way down, and the tanners pledged themselves to do almost anything and everything to strengthen the leather market. The meeting no sooner adjourned than the tanners made their escape by every exit and bought up every hide in sight. They were afraid of one another. The effect of this was that the price of hides advanced 4 cents while the tanners were in the city. During the time they were in session some of the big packers opened a hall and entertained the tanners. Nothing was too good for them and the packers came out of the big end of the horn. But that there is cause for complaint this year there is very little doubt. The hide and leather market has never been in such a demoralized condition as at the present time. Not only are prices 'way down, but there is practically no demand for the articles, and the market is full in every department. There is no combination nor association among the dealers, and it is said there will probably never be one, for the reason that competition is close and the interests are so numerous that they could not be kept from clashing. The tanners are divided into four classes. They are the sole-leather manufacturers, uppers, belting and fancy leathers. The depression is in sole leather. There is one firm in Philadelphia manufacturing belting which consumes in one tannery a carload of hides every day. New England and the South are also large producers. The majority of hides which are used in the manufacture of sole leather are of South American growth. The native-grown hides which are used for that purpose are only from rangers and branded cattle. No South American hides are being bought in the markets now, and native-grown is so low that they will hardly bear transportation. The weather for the past few seasons has had a tendency to depress trade. At first thought that statement will probably appear absurd, but a little reflection will show its soundness. During mild weather people will wear old shoes. They are easy on the feet. If it rains and is not too cold those same shoes will be worn increased in rubbers. But during dry cold weather people must wear good shoes. They must have good soles on them, and consequently new ones must be bought frequently. We have had no really cold weather for several seasons, and as a consequence people are wearing their old shoes. The effect of this has been to cause a falling off in the number of shoes manufactured and a corresponding decrease in the demand for leather with which to manufacture them.

Liberated too Late.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 27.—Buyers cannot be found for Russian oats liberated by the withdrawal of the prohibition on exports. Foreign buyers appear to have supplied their wants in other markets.
