Mr. S. G. Rigdon, of Russell & Co., Portland, has been in this vicinity for several days.

Some pretty little lambs, which were too weak to keep up with the procession, in a 12,000 band of sheep taken out of Oregon yesterday, were distributed amongst good little boys and girls of The Dalles yesterday.

At Lyle, a promising little community below The Dalles, on the Washington side of the Columbia, the good people met together Saturday evening and enjoyed a very successful rendition of The Mikado, by local talent.

Capt. McNulty reports that in all his experience on the middle Columbia river he never met with a stronger wind than blew yesterday when he made a landing at Mosier.

The air is full of rumors of new discoveries of gold. It is said that eighteen claims have been filed near the mouth of Wood gulch and that Mose Claussen and Elmer Hadley have discovered a quartz ledge on Rock creek, on the McCann place.

The ferry was kept busy all day yesterday ferrying a band of 12,000 mutton sheep across the Columbia at this point, for the markets of Puget sound and British Columbia.

Recently, upon an order from Mrs. Sinnott, Seufert Bros. shipped a couple of Royal Chinook Salmon to her sons, in college at Notre Dame, Indiana.

Blow ye winds of morning, Blow ye winds he, ho, Clear away the morning dew, And blow ye winds, he, ho.

Coming in from Antelope yesterday, passengers "passed the happy hours away" chanting:

Oh! blow, wind, blow, from the far Northwest, And make the dust give us a rest. Blow it high, blow it low, blow it all away From this dusty here below.

On the borders of the city they were met by a musical quartet with—

Oh! the dust, the palpable dust! It chokes alike the bad and the just! It fills one's eyes, and ears, and nose, And sits through ladies' finest hose— Or maybe it's worth a probably dose.

AN UNFORTUNATE MAN.

Disabled Perhaps for Life, While Stealing a Ride to Oregon.

A man named Arthur M. Freeman, while in the act of stealing a ride west through the Blue mountains Saturday, was seriously injured, and was brought to the Umatilla house in a dangerous condition.

In this instance however, an opportunity was afforded to gain particulars, and a reporter of THE CHRONICLE visited the man in room 115, at the Umatilla house, where his case is being attended to, at the expense of the railway company, by Dr. Doane.

Freeman seems to be worthy of a higher classification than the ordinary tramp. He appears to be in possession of the principles of sobriety, and the habits of industry, but is sadly out of luck.

Last year he spent whatever money he had, and much of his time, in a Denver hospital. He has a father, mother and brothers, all of whom are on the ragged edge in the race of life, and unable to help him.

He was being unable to help himself financially, could not respond to a letter in his pocket from his poor old mother, asking him for money.

His case was a desperate one, and setting his face toward Oregon, in the hope of bettering his condition, he must steal a ride or go on foot.

He watched for an opportunity, and mounted the top of a Pullman coach, to seek the regions where hope led him.

He became chilled from exposure, and when the train stopped was in the act of descending from his perch when he was caught between the projections of the car roofs and was so crushed that he has been rendered physically helpless, possibly forever.

In this condition he was taken into the car, and will perhaps be carried on today, if able, to a hospital in Portland.

A stretcher with the Union Pacific label on it, rested in the hallway this morning, opposite the room in which he was being attended, and possibly we may never know anything further concerning his fate; but from what has been seen by THE CHRONICLE reporter, enough is learned to call public attention to this phase of railroading, and to lead to reflections as to whether or not there should be some system devised to meet emergencies such as this.

It is perhaps an isolated case in the career of an unfortunate class which is steadily on the increase, but it suggests that there ought to be a remedy amongst all the benevolent associations of the land, to reach out for deserving victims of the failure of success.

Were he a Mason, an Odd Fellow, a Knight of Pythias, or a member of the A. O. U. W., his case would at once be seen to, but unfortunately for him he is not allied to either of these organizations.

Is there not some organization to furnish relief in a matter of this kind? In administering to the unfortunate it became necessary for Dr. Doane to prescribe stimulants.

To this Freeman, strenuously as he could, objected, saying that he never used liquor, and this is the incident which called our reporters' attention to his unhappy condition.

When it became known in The Dalles that Mr. Blaine had resigned the office of secretary of state and that the president had accepted his resignation promptly, it created quite a stir in political circles.

Opinion among the leading republicans seemed to be in favor of Blaine, and the majority of the men approached declared that his nomination was now assured, and that it meant the triumph of the republican party next November by an immense majority.

Not all, however, were of this opinion. Here and there an old hand was found who failed to summarize the situation that way.

Among the democrats the news was everywhere received with delight. All of them were jubilant about it, and freely expressed the opinion that Blaine would surely be nominated, and as surely beaten.

THE CHRONICLE voices the sentiment of reflective minds when it adds that it is much easier to say light things than it is to candidly weigh the facts concerning Blaine, and at this time in his nomination we see signs which most inevitably be the crowning achievement of his eventful life and ambition.

There are more people today in the United States who want to vote for James G. Blaine electors than were ever counted for any man before, and, with all due allowances, if he is the nominee he will sweep the country.
