A bulletin issued by the census bureau shows that the assessed valuation of all property in the United States exclusive of railroads increased nearly fifty eight thousand millions or about 46 per cent. in ten years from 1880 to 1890. Should the same relations be found to exist between the assessed valuation in 1892 and the valuation as it existed in 1890, the absolute wealth of the United States may be estimated at $64,648,000,000, or more than $1,000 per capita, against $514 in 1860, $780 in 1870, and $870 in 1880. The history of the world furnishes no parallel to this, and it must be remembered that this immense stride in material advancement was made while tariff reformers and evangelists of despair were muttering their bootless forebodings of imminent calamity and disaster. The United States is the greatest, richest, best country God ever made. To borrow from Burns, the creator of his "prentice hand" on Babylon, Egypt, Greece, Rome, Great Britain, and then he made the United States.

A dealer in New York advertises for sale a cargo of American pig tin from California at the regular price of the imported product. Now ye sons of calamity and woe, and ye disciples of Ananias in the special department of tin plate lying and all ye down trodden and tax-oppressed worshippers of Cobden who groan beneath the weight of 7-12 of a cent tax per annum on your yearly purchases of tin ware, now is the opportunity of a century. Lay in a supply of good, honest, patriotic, American manufactured and California produced tin plate, sufficient to last you till the dying wail of the last tin plate liar shall have faded softly into eternal night.

Jim Hill, of the Great Northern railroad, was granted a franchise through Spokane, on the understood condition that shippers at that place were to have terminal rates. Spokane was delighted and Jim got what he wanted. Now that Hill has possession of the franchise he tells the Spokane people that they are not justly entitled to terminal rates and must be satisfied with "relative" rates. For the meaning of this new term in railroading, Jim refers the people to Webster's dictionary. We suspect, in Hill's own vocabulary "relative" is "all-the-traffic-will-bear" writ small.

We learn from the Washington Independent that Garfield county, Washington, has bonded its small debt of $30,000 and sold the bonds, bearing six per cent. interest for $300, premium. This transaction will effect a saving of $1,200 per annum to the taxpayers as they have been paying 10 per cent. interest on their debt. There is a good chance for some of our newly elected. Solons to signalize themselves by effecting the passage of a law in this state that will enable counties to bond their debts and thereby save many a dollar to the taxpayers in the form of reduced interest.

Umatilla county, which is strongly democratic, gave Ellis 51 majority. The Pendleton democratic paper says the democrats made no effort to secure votes for Slater, "believing it was effort wasted as he could not possibly be elected."

Masonic House Warming.
CHICAGO, June 10.—Proud members of the masonic fraternity held a house-warming on the twenty-first floor of the Masonic temple yesterday afternoon. Five through elevators carried the 700 guests to the top floor of the highest commercial building in the world, and the board of directors of the Masonic fraternity temple association, which built and owns the structure, did the honors as hosts. An orchestra played and the palms and ferns which transformed the crystal-roofed hall into a conservatory, incited several of the younger set to indulge in brief and surreptitious waltzes, for there are 10,000 square feet of dancing area in this altitudinous reception-room. Many people were turned away because they were not provided with tickets, but beginning to-day 25 cents will permit anybody to take the elevator and see how the world looks from a twenty-first floor window. It is the intention of the association to have this conservatory open to visitors every day. Music will be furnished twice a week.

AN ITALIAN OVEN

Contrivances That Prevent Heat, Smoke and Other Annoyances.
When the Italian cooking apparatus is used, neither dust, dirt, gas, smoke, heavy smoke, soggy potatoes nor explosions ruffles tempers. It is neither range nor stumpy stove. It looks like a tub covered with shining tiles of blue and white porcelain. It is a trifle high, and in order to operate it to the best advantage it is best to stand on a little foot-stool or platform. Under the stove is a semicircular closet reaching up to about half its height and holding from one to three sacks (about four bushels) of charcoal. On the top are one, two or three openings—little square, boxlike grates, sinking perhaps four or five inches and about eight inches square. Under the grates are receptacles with doors for ashes, and in the center is a larger receptacle for heating dishes.

Over the stove and about half way up the wall is a canopy, shaped like the stove at the bottom, but gradually narrowing to the top at the front and side until it is almost funnel shaped, where it joins the chimney, is an opening into the chimney, about the size of a very small stovepipe. There is always a good draft without dampers.
For boiling, a few bits of cane are put in the square or grate over which the kettle or the saucepan is to be placed; then a shovelful of charcoal is put over the canes, a light is applied and, if you are in a hurry, over the hole is put a curious contrivance very like a stovepipe, perhaps two feet high, with a funnel at the top, a contrivance that is expressively known in Italian as "il diavolo" possibly because it starts the fire in such a marvelously short time.

If the articles to be boiled are vegetables, the kettle is placed directly over the grate, and "il diavolo" is laid upon the shelf above. If, however, something more delicate is to be cooked, a tripod about three inches high is put over the grate and the boiler is placed on that, so that there is not even a possibility of burning or scorching; then a circle of coals is put on the outside of the stove about the boiler, which is tightly covered. It takes from twenty minutes to half an hour to cook this way, and everything cooked is cooked all over.

For baking, the preliminary preparations are the same, but the dish holding the mixture is placed in an outer dish of block tin, and over it is put that wonderful magician, the "forno di campagna," that looks like a peck or a half bushel measure, according to its size, made of sheet iron and inverted. There is an opening at one side, up which slips the handle of the baking tin, or the saucepan, and over which the form slips, settling firmly down on the stove.

Under the dish that contains the material to be baked is the charcoal fire in the grate; about it glowing coals are put and replenished before the glow dies out, and on top of the "forno" more glowing coals are placed and treated in the same way. Everywhere there is an equal diffusion of heat. Mince pies, sponge cake, custards, bread and turkeys are browned perfectly. The "forno" wasn't invented by an Italian, but by a Frenchman, and it would be quite possible to use it with our charcoal stoves.—New York Sun.

Scotland and the Thistle.

The thistle was selected as the national emblem of Scotland in the year 1010. It was during the reign of Malcolm I that a notable invasion of the country was made by the Danes. They came in thousands, and landing on the coast swarmed over the inhabited districts like locusts, destroying, burning and plundering wherever they went. For safety the inhabitants fled to the castles and fortified towns, and among the most notable of the fortresses of Aberdeenshire was Staines castle, where were collected a large number of people of the neighborhood. The Danes projected a surprise. Approaching the castle in the darkness they planned to scale its walls, and hid aside their shoes that the greater secrecy might be observed when drawing near to the fortifications.

The surprise might have been successful had it not been for the fact that, on descending into the dry moat, they found, to their great discomfiture and mortification, it was filled with thistles, by which their feet were so severely pricked that several made an outcry, which aroused the defenders of the castle and brought them to the wall in time to repel the onset. Regarding their good fortune in repelling the Danes as due to the thistles, these plants were immediately placed in the arms of Scotland and adopted as the emblem of the country.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Celebrated Dog.

Wordsworth and Scott both celebrated in their poems the famous old Gelert. This dog, a deerhound, was given by King John to his son-in-law Llewellyn, who kept him at his hunting lodge, in the neighborhood of the Welsh mountain Snowdon. Gelert was missed one morning from the hunt by his master, Llewellyn; upon his return to the lodge, he saw the dog, and discovered that his mouth was besmeared with blood. Concluding that the dog had devoured his child, the infuriated master slew the poor animal. Upon investigation, he discovered a dead wolf by the child's cradle, while the child was safely and soundly sleeping. The brave dog had saved Llewellyn's heir from the wolf. A monument was erected to the faithful creature, which bears the name of Beth-Gelert.—Harper's Young People.

How Negroes Catch a Scorpion.

In Jamaica the negroes believe that scorpions know their names; so they never call out, "See, a scorpion," when they meet with one on the ground or wall, for fear of his escaping. They thus indirectly recognize the scorpion's delicate appreciation of sound; but if you wish to stop a scorpion in his flight, blow air on him from the mouth, and he at once coils himself up. I have repeatedly done this; but with a spider it has a contrary effect.—London Spectator.

A Pointer.

"I am very much pleased with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says H. M. Bangs, the druggist at Chatsworth, Ill. "During the epidemic of the grippe here it took the lead and was very much better liked than other cough medicines." The grip requires precisely the same treatment as a very severe cold, for which this remedy is so efficient. It will promptly loosen a cold and relieve the lungs, soon effecting a permanent cure, while most other medicines in common use for colds only give temporary relief. 50 cent bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists. d&w

Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.

Miss Grace Littlejohn is a little girl, aged eleven years, residing in Baltimore, Ohio. Read what she says: "I was troubled with rheumatism for two years, but could get nothing to do me any good. I was so helpless that I had to be carried like a babe when I was advised to get a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I got it from our druggists, Mr. J. A. Kumber, and in three days I was up and walking around. I have not felt any return of it since and my limbs are limber as they ever were." 50 cent bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists. d&w

NEW TO-DAY.

TO THE PUBLIC.—It having come to our knowledge that a party in the Dalles in selling lime has made the assertion that he charges more for other brands than the "Oregon" because they are better, thereby implying that the "Oregon" is an inferior article, we desire to state that the "Oregon" is the strongest lime on the market; that it will work more plastic and leave the work when set stronger and firmer than any other lime at present manufactured in either Oregon or Washington. Wm. Butler & Co., Agents at the Dalles for the "Oregon" lime, are instructed to furnish, free of charge, any and all Oregon lime, which does not fully come up to the stipulations above set forth. The object of this notice is solely to defend our goods against the false imputations and statements of any person whatsoever. The Or. Marble and Lime Company, by T. F. OSBORN, General Agt. 5-24-dlm
