BOSTON ACROSTICS.

A High Old Sensation Caused by a
Waggish Student.

PUBLIC LIBRARY TABLET REMOVED.

An Ornamental Facade Used For Advertising Purposes.

THE GLOBE HAS A SUGGESTION.

An Esoteric Message Speaking With
The Savory Aroma of Boston
Life.

Boston, June 22.—The acrostic which a waggish firm of architects placed upon the new public library building of this city has now been removed after much indignant discussion. Upon the facade of that structure the names of several great men had been arranged in such a manner that the perpendicular rows of initial letters spelled the firm's title. The tablet has been torn down and another will soon be put in its place. To do away with all offensive suggestions of advertising and at the same time meet the poetic requirements, the following arrangement of illustrious names, has been suggested by the Globe:

Bion. Beethoven.
Aristides. Emerson.
Kepler. Angelo.
Euripides. Nelson.
Dante. Schopenhauer.

The names are inspiring, and the esoteric message they bear exhales the savory aroma peculiar to Boston life. Glancing at the one the mind of the passer-by would be stimulated, and taking in the deep significance of the other the cravings of his physical being would be met and profoundly satisfied. This is by all means the right inscription for the pride of Boston,—her magnificent library building.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

Concerning Complaints About What Washington "Gets."

The Seattle papers are still complaining about the large appropriations awarded, as they claim, to Oregon, in comparison with what Washington "gets." They feel sore at the probable defeat of the Lake Washington canal appropriation, and still insist that all appropriations for the Columbia river are for Oregon. The Seattle Telegraph publishes what it calls "a comparison of what the two states are receiving from the present congress," as follows:

OREGON.
Cascade	$ 435,000
Same, for continuation	1,310,500
Dalles	250,000
Same, for continuation	2,610,500
Mouth of Columbia river	350,000
Upper Willamette	30,000
Lower Willamette	135,000
Coos bay	310,000
Yaquina	85,000
Tillamook	15,000
Three other items	40,000
Total	$5,885,500
WASHINGTON.
Gray's harbor	$ 50,000
Olympia	35,000
Seattle	300,000
Cowlitz	3,000
Puget Sound, etc	15,000
Swinomish	25,000
Naselle	1,500
Yanover	35,000
Willapa	18,000
Upper Columbia and Snake	10,000
Total	$390,000

The trouble with this sort of classification is that it ignores the fact that every dollar appropriated for the Columbia river is as much for the benefit of Washington as for Oregon. Remembering this fact, says the Telegram, the totals would stand:

Oregon $3,407,955

Washington 2,887,525

Of course, the sound cities are not anxious to see the Columbia river opened, so as to give the producers of the Inland Empire, a natural and easy outlet for their products. They prefer that all the wheat and other surplus products of eastern Washington should be tagged over the Cascade mountains to the sound, but that is no legitimate excuse for the constant misrepresentation that the appropriations for the Columbia river are solely for Oregon. They are for the mutual benefit of eastern Oregon and eastern Washington equally, or rather more for the benefit of eastern Washington, because it has a much larger quantity of surplus products tributary to the Columbia than eastern Oregon has. The Lake Washington canal is essentially a local improvement; the opening of the Columbia river is for the vast benefit of the whole Inland Empire.

The cholera is extending in the manufacturing suburbs of Paris. There were eight deaths yesterday at Aubervilliers.

CHICAGO MOSAIC.

Bitterness of Partisan Feeling Forebly
Illustrated.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Partisan feeling grows more bitter every day. Here is the weather bureau of a republican administration trying to blow the democrats' wigwam into the lake. But, with all seriousness, such visitations warn Chicago that, while it is not a city that is troubled with tornadoes, nevertheless it is not free from danger due to the ravages of boisterous winds. The storm of the 13th was essentially a visitor from the south. It had all the characteristics of a storm of the tropics. Perhaps it had lost its way, and, catching sight of the lake, mistook that expanse of water for the Gulf of Mexico. It had some of the aspects and suggestiveness of the ardent gentlemen from Dixie who blow into Chicago straw-hatted and linen-coated with the first warm breath of springtime.

All the dark horses, including Gorman, Morrison, Russell and Campbell, with their followers, are making haste to clamber into the band wagon of the victor.

Seats in the wigwam are for 20,000 people. The chairman's desk is the same over which Cleveland and Hendricks were nominated in 1884.

Despite the almost certainty that Cleveland will be nominated on the first ballot, the Boies people have announced that their candidate will remain in the race till the end, not only as a matter of state pride, but as a protest against the nomination of a candidate not supported by the delegation of his own state.

The weather department is politely asked to refrain a trifle. Chicago has been roasted with sunshine and basted with showers quite enough. It is thoroughly done.

One of the conspicuous advantages enjoyed by Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts, as a dark horse is that he is so exceedingly dark.

David B. Hill, drops out of political sight as gracefully and noiselessly as a goose feather in the calm June twilight.

It has been said by eastern democrats that the west has developed for their party no great popular leaders since the war. There is some truth and some truth in this statement. It has conspicuous contradictions in Gov. Boies, Senator Palmer and Col Morrison. It must be admitted, however, that, while Palmer and Morrison may be classified as distinguished democrats, they do not rank with Gov. Boies in popularity.

Col. Morrison is exalted in the esteem of men. Senator Palmer has achieved marked distinction. Palmer ran a fairly good race in 1888. But success must succeed, and Palmer failed. Morrison has never run for a state office, and he has suffered defeat. Of the trio Boies is the only one who has a running record. He is the only democrat who has succeeded in carrying a republican state on national issues. Other republican states have been carried, but local issues and items have been conspicuous factors in the results. His hopeful friends who have opened headquarters for him in Chicago are right in believing their candidate will take high rank in the view of the delegates to the democratic national convention.

Salvation Army Hallelujah.

New York, June 22.—The startling and somewhat sensational announcement is made that Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, Rev. Lyman Abbott, pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn; Rev. Dr. B. F. Decosta, of the church of St. John the Divine, and Rev. Henry Wilson, formerly Dr. Rainsford's assistant at St. Georges church, as well as Mr. and Mrs. Briggs, have enrolled themselves in the auxiliary league of the Salvation Army, and by this action have signified their approval of the objects of that organization.

Must Stop Wragling.

New York, June 22.—The executive committee of the Irish National league has unanimously adopted the following resolution: "That we condemn the division now existing in Ireland. We declare that we will not contribute one cent to either party until they unite; and we also condemn the action of either party in sending a delegate to America, thereby transferring their quarrels to this country."

THE PRIMARY ISSUE.

Tariff Reform, or the Force Bill Idea,
Must Dominate.

DEMOCRATS TO CHOOSE WEAPONS.

Cleveland Means Tariff Reform—Hill or Gorman Force Bill.

HOW GORMAN'S DISTINCTION CAME.

Possible Consequences of a Contest
Which Would Revive Old War
Issues—Other Notes.

Chicago, June 22.—The republican national platform presents two leading issues. It pronounces her protection and declares in favor of a law upon the time of the force bill. It is not possible, as campaigns go, that the contest to be determined next November can be fought on two principal issues. Either the protection idea or the force-bill idea will become the primary issue. The democratic platform and nomination to be made today must determine which of these two issues shall be dominant. The democrats thus have the choice of weapons. By the nomination of Mr. Cleveland, tariff reform would be written first upon the democratic banner and then stamped upon every feature of the impending canvass. The force-bill idea would become a subordinate issue. On the other hand, the nomination of Hill or Gorman would be an acceptance of the force-bill issue. Whatever distinction Mr. Gorman has achieved outside of mere politics was gained through his antagonism of the force bill. If he represents anything as a publicist it is opposition to that method of controlling elections. It might, perhaps, be unfortunate for the whole country to shift the issue of November from tariff reform, where the opening of the campaign finds it, to the old and baleful sectional contention between the north and the south. It would be harmful and possibly disastrous to the south. It might prove of incalculable injury to the north. The two great parties would form in line upon the issues of 1860 instead of the issues of 1892. The resentments and bitterness of the war would be revived. The country would go backward instead of advancing.

Telegraphic Flash.

All the royalty and high military of Potsdam were at the station yesterday to meet King Humbert and Queen Margaret, who came on a special from Berlin, and were received on the platform by Emperor William and empress. The emperor stepped forward when the train stopped, holding a huge bouquet of red roses. As Queen Margaret alighted he presented the bouquet and kissed her hand. He then turned to the king and they embraced three times. While the empress was kissing Queen Margaret, the young princesses were brought forward and were kissed and embraced by both king and queen. The emperor led Queen Margaret to a carriage drawn by four horses. The empress and the king followed and took another carriage, and the party drove off to the new palace.

The Miranda, with the Peary relief expedition, will sail from New York Monday for the ice bound regions of the north. They take with them a lot of supplies, together with knives, files, hatchets and other implements, for the destitute Esquimaux on the west coast of Greenland from Cape York northwardly.

An accident on the Grand Trunk, out of Portland, Me., yesterday, on account of a bad washout, resulted in several immediate deaths and numerous severe and perhaps fatal injuries to passengers. The work of transhipping passengers was retarded by the fact that the noon train took 300 pilgrims for the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupton from Portland, besides pilgrims from other points.
