OUR BOW TO THE PUBLIC.

With this issue the undersigned assumes Editorial control and management of THE CHRONICLE. Our predecessor, on retiring last Saturday, says all of the past, perhaps, which it was necessary to say; but as our course leads on it may not be amiss if we say, with the paragraphist, that: "No man can accomplish much, either in politics or with a wheelbarrow, unless he takes sides." THE CHRONICLE takes sides. In local politics there is no longer any contest, but in the national field the threshold is just crossed. We have hoisted the flag of Harrison and Reid because THE CHRONICLE, to be a success, must be essentially progressive, and to be progressive in a national sense, in the United States one must be republican. The task of the republican party in the next canvass is not to get the consensus of a majority of the votes of the country. That it already has. The progress of America requires at its head a party which is homogeneous; which has convictions and the courage of its convictions. A party whose aim is to do something—and not merely to hold offices.

The history of the republican party is a history of action, a history of deeds. Whatever has been done in thirty years has been done by it. We have not always been absolutely wise, but we have always been wise in our day and generation.

There is no act of our past history far enough back to be seen in just such lights, which any honest observer will say was not the best that could have been devised by human brains.

Those acts which are yet under the stress of human passion, the very last acts we did, are slowly emerging from the storm of obloquy and abuse, and taking visibly the place they have always really held, a place among the great deeds of a great country.

The reproaches which were heaped upon the last revision of the tariff are disappearing before the light of its practical workings, and the country adjusted to the new conditions will demand a period of rest from the business agitations of which the democratic party is the prolific source.

Business men are everywhere beginning to feel that some measure of stability should attach to our laws, and that a statute of the United States which affects business should not be a pitfall and a snare.

To injure business there is no such powerful specific as uncertainty. If there is to be a perpetual threat against the laws on which business is founded, what more exhausting condition can be imagined?

If the late revision of the tariff is working its way to favor, if business has already adjusted itself to it, what reason can there be more controlling in the next election than the desire of business men to let things alone, to stand by the existing order of affairs?

Such, in brief, is to be the future position of THE CHRONICLE upon the politics of this nation, to carry out these principles, and with an acquaintance of over thirty years in the newspaper field in Oregon perhaps further introduction is unnecessary.

We invite all old patrons to stay with us, and to bring as many friends with them as possible, sanguine in the belief that we shall be able to serve you all, faithfully, in every manner, to the extent of our ability. Very Respectfully, D. C. IRELAND.

The enthusiasm in Tammany hall over Cleveland's nomination was so intense that the oil froze in the lamps. As we understand the situation, Tammany will not be reconciled to the work of dark and devious methods. It cannot consistently advocate the election of a man who was nominated between two days.

Benjamin Harrison may be sour, sowed-off and all that sort of thing, but lucky. His lack is what the presbyterians call Predestination with a capital P.

It takes a bow-legged man to stand the case upon the great democratic platform.

Mr. W. M. Terry, who has been in the drug business at Elkton, Ky., for the past twelve years, says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives better satisfaction than any other cough medicine I have ever sold." There is good reason for this. No other will cure a cold so quickly; no other is so certain a preventive and cure for croup; no other affords so much relief in cases of whooping cough. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists. d&w
