SAVAGE SLAUGHTER.

The Strikers Fight Like Hostile Indians on the War Path.

CAUSE OF CONFLICTING REPORTS.

Only Such Dispatches Were Sent Out as Leaders of the Mob Dictate.

REFUGEES ARRIVE IN SPOKANE.

Anarchy Openly Talked—Lauding the Savagery and Censuring Lawful Action.

SPOKANE, July 15.—Newspaper reporters and everybody suspected of sympathy for the victims of the savagery of the mob in Coeur d'Alene are under strict surveillance, and it is almost impossible to get anything reliable from the seat of war. A few embryonic anarchists held forth on Howard street yesterday in this city. The slaughter of the innocent men and the destruction of valuable property in the Coeur d'Alenes was lauded, while the government was censured for sending troops to quell the riot. One fellow, who was evidently a stranger to soap bubbles, went so far as to suggest an attack upon the banks of the city here, provided the rioters in Coeur d'Alene were successful. These anarchist sentiments were not relishable to the Americans present and the speakers gradually slunk out of sight. This city is the rendezvous of refugees, and their experiences tell of a savagery succeeding lawlessness showing that the instincts of civilization were thrown to the winds and all that is vile in human nature has been brought to the surface in that region. The annals of western ruffianism have few blacker pages than that upon which must be written the deeds of the men, who followed up the fleeing miners, and finding them unarmed, terrorized and defenseless, shot them down in wanton sport and robbed them of their little belongings. It is a source of regret that justice can never hope to lay her hands upon the men who have done these vile deeds. It is unpleasant to realize that men capable of such acts will, in all possibility, escape the gallows. Their immunity from conviction is a reproach to the law, to organized labor and to civilization itself. With the coward's instinct they cloaked their identity under the darkness of night. Already they have been swallowed up in the maelstrom of turbulent humanity that has such thorough control of life and property in the troubled districts. None can be found to give them up, none to point them out to an avenging public. They will probably continue to wander at will, compliant to the law where the law has force, but ready for fresh deeds of violence at the first lapse of regular authority. All reports to the effect that quiet has been restored at Wardner needs undoubted confirmation.

SEEDS OF DEMAGOGY.

The Moral and Legal Rights of Capital and Labor.

From the Spokane Review.

The seeds of demagogy spread like a flash and take root in an hour. A few days ago the proposition was laid down in the senate of the United States that the employer has not the right to discharge the employe; that there must be one form of law for the person who hires five men and another form of law for the person who hires 500; that large manufacturing establishments are public institutions and subject to the popular will of the community, and that an employer who has given work to a crowd of men for several years must be compelled to go on hiring those same men at whatever wages they see fit to ask, regardless of the condition of the market or the pressure of competition. That amazing doctrine has found a responsive echo in the Coeur d'Alenes. "If capital has the right to discharge men like us," exclaims one of the strikers, "soon one of the worst forms of slavery would prevail." But capital has not discharged the men in the Coeur d'Alenes; they have simply discharged themselves. Capital has simply refused to let labor lay down all the propositions of the contract. It had relinquished the privilege of employing whomsoever it desired to work in its property, but has protested against the dictum that it must also be a silent partner in the regulation of wages.

It is wildly preposterous to say that labor is justified in meeting this determination with mob tyranny and nihilism of valuable property. If that proposition is defensible in a high wage camp like the Coeur d'Alenes, it must be defensible in every section of the United States; and upon this reasoning universal nihilism is demanded. It is humiliating to know that the forms of popular government have brought us to this at last. It is pitiable the way politicians and partisans are permitting themselves to be awed into defense of the decrees of force.

The trouble springs from a confusion of the moral and legal rights of man. It is readily seen that the old and faithful employe has a moral claim upon the employer: and it is lamentable that too often this obligation is ignored and ridden down by the requirements of competition. But the old and faithful employe has no right to take a rifle on his shoulder, and a bomb in his hand, and set up a lawless enforcement of a moral right. With more reason could it be said that the child had a right to go with dynamite in hand to the parent who had offered it a worsted suit instead of broadcloth, for in the family circle there is a close approachment of the moral and legal obligations of the parent.

False public sentiment is even more responsible for the Coeur d'Alene tragedy than are the active participants. There can be no question that long brooding upon their troubles has convinced the strikers that their course is just and justifiable. They at least cannot be charged with demagoguery. But a false public sentiment has pandered to these views when it knew they were wrong. It has been the breeze that has fanned the spark of insurrection. It is more reprehensible than the mob itself.

Martial Law at Homestead.

PITTSBURGH, July 15.—While martial law has not been officially declared in Homestead it has taken place to all practical purposes. This result was caused by illegal arrests by special policemen yesterday morning, when two additional companies of troops with twenty rounds of ball cartridges and fixed bayonets were detailed to patrol the town. They were instructed that in case of an arrest by the police for any manifest breach of the peace, drunkenness and the like, they were not to interfere, but in all other cases they are to take both prisoner and policeman before the provost marshal, and if the arrest is illegal the policeman will be punished.

Gen. Snowden puts it euphemistically by saying the military will co-operate with the civil authorities in preventing illegal arrests, and it is somewhat more certain for the preservation of the peace. It was reported yesterday that the town was officially declared under martial law, and the strikers were not at all pleased when they heard it, as they thought it presaged an immediate attempt to turn in non-union men. Neither are the locked-out men pleased with the action of the Carnegie men in other mills threatening to strike unless a conference is granted at Homestead, as they believe the others can do them good in case of a long struggle in remaining at work and helping them financially.

The Price of Wheat.

Pacific Farmer. There is no good cause why the price of wheat should not be as high this year as it was last, as official reports of the Russian prospects show that the general outlook is much worse than it was in the early part of last summer. Locusts have destroyed the crops in Caucasus, and in southern Russia the crops have been ravaged by worms and field marmot. This is worse than it was last year, because there is now no old grain in sight.

The Weaker Vessel.

Washington Post. The Rochester Herald says: "Stanley renounced his allegiance to the United States that his inordinate lust of power might be gratified by a seat in the English parliament." This is not true. The woman tempted him and he did eat. He was persuaded by the importunities of that smart wife of his. Henry is the weaker vessel of the two.

A GANG IN MINNESOTA.

They Defy Law and Order in the Quiet Village of Burns.

THE MCKINLEY BILL OF COURSE.

Some of Senator Palmer's Higher Law Friends Get Away From Illinois.

A WHOLE POPULATION TERRIFIED.

George Small, Carnegie, Van B. De Lashmott, and All Such Men Must Be Put Down.

ANOKA, Minn., July 15.—The village of Burns, across the Mississippi river, from here, is in the midst of terrors and the town practically in the hands of a gang of desperadoes, who are burning buildings and threatening the lives of citizens. George Small a wealthy and prosperous farmer, has been very active in his efforts to lodge one of the ruffians behind the bars, for criminal acts. A warrant was sworn out against one of the gang, but it has never been served. The whole populace of Burns was terrified and the gang's actions were continually causing annoyance. The grave crime of arson has been laid at their doors several times. Monday the handsome residence of Small was set on fire, but after a fierce fight by the family and neighbors the flames were extinguished. On Wednesday Small was in Anoka, and in the evening word was brought to him that his elegant residence had again been set on fire by unknown desperadoes and totally consumed. The sheriff and citizens will make an endeavor to get at the culprits, and things are in such a condition that no man's life is safe and all go armed. The deed is supposed to be spitework. Small was open in his remarks against the gang. The home of Thomas Gorman will go next; so says the leader of the desperadoes. If the sheriff fails to capture the gang, Gov. Merriam will be asked to send a company of militia on their track.

Telegraphic Flashes.

A London dispatch says William Waldorf Astor continues to make rapid progress toward recovery. The author of the bogus dispatch announcing his death is being diligently sought for. The dispatch was signed "Clement," and the family are surprised that this announcement was accepted as true by Astor's New York agent. No one named Clement is connected with the Astors in any way.

An independent Parnelite organ says the select circle of liberals in London last night received the announcement that the home-rule bill was postponed by an agreement with the Irish party in order that some big reform measure may be introduced in the coming parliament.

Tim Healy is elected to parliament. There was much rowdiness during the polling. Healy was assaulted and one of his friends killed.

The people of Hunter county, on the Tombigbee river, Alabama, are absolutely destitute on account of the floods. They have appealed to the governor to ask congress for relief. He has issued a proclamation asking the people of the state to contribute for the purpose.

Cholera is spreading with alarming effect throughout Russia. The Astrakhan Messenger publishes the details of the recent riots at that place, growing out of the epidemic. It says the mob held the town two days. The hospital was burned to the ground, and all the medical staff more or less injured. One doctor and his assistant were brutally beaten by the mob and trampled to death. Patients in the hospital were carried to the banks of the Volga, and fed with milk as a supposed antidote to the poison administered by the doctors. Several succumbed to this extraordinary treatment. Only the firing of a volley of infantry brought the maddened mob to reason.
