MORAL MONSTROSITIES.

What is society to do with a moral monstrosity like Alice Mitchell? Here is a girl who was obviously afflicted with a form of insanity, due to some congenital deficiency, rather than to a breaking down of nerve force or blood poisoning. She killed Freda Warde neither in anger nor cupidity; the deed was that of a mad person, but lamentably the madness is not of a type that will permit continual incarceration in an insane asylum. Unless it should develop into a more positive form, as was the case of Wilson, the murderer of Maunie Walsh, under the laws she will be released before many months, and a nolle prosequi will probably dispose of the murder charge. Then what? The girl will drag out a miserable existence; a source of embarrassment to her relatives and friends, and a constant menace to all those around her. The more humane wish is that she would either kill herself, which she claims was her original intention when she resolved upon the murder of Freda Warde, or lapse into hopeless imbecility or madness that will keep her under the lock and key of the asylum.

On Saturday last Mayor Quimby of Kettle Falls narrowly escaped drowning. He took a skiff at the ferry landing intending to leave it just above the rapids and walk to the place where some men were engaged in moving his steamer, but one of his oars broke while he was still in the swift current and he was carried into the rapids, where his boat filled and struck a rock, splitting the entire length of the boat. Mr. Quimby sprang upon a rock and was seen by the men, but the roar of the waters prevented him from hearing their shouts of encouragement, and believing that no boat could reach his perilous position which he could not maintain long, drenched as he was and night approaching, he seized upon a stranded plank, and clinging to it launched out into the seething waters and was swept down through the rapids. The plank being thoroughly water-soaked sank instead of supporting him, and he struck out for shore, which he was so fortunate as to reach nearly exhausted with his struggles with the waves. No one who witnessed his adventure believed he could survive. An Indian put out in a canoe in an effort to assist him, but the current was too strong and he could make no progress.

Jack Dempsey has made a fortune in the prize ring, but he has also squandered it. He is now a beaten man, with bankruptcy staring him in the face, and no means of redeeming his fallen fortunes. Dempsey married an East Portland girl, and some time ago was forced to mortgage their home to raise money. This fact has been made public, and a benefit is being planned for him. But benefits soon lose their novelty, and the outlook is not rosy for the champion of his class. The glamour of Dempsey's life has been made so much of that duty to a rising generation requires the portraiture of the darker side of pugilism. It is a debased and vicious calling, with prizes only for the few, and even those of uncertain tenure.

Writing from Italy to the Review, "A Spokane Citizen Abroad" says: "Laborers here are paid a franc a day and work twelve hours. They go to the United States and receive $2 a day for ten hours, or less, and in a year or so work up a riot or a strike. I would a hundred times rather have Chinese immigrants than Italians; they are more reliable and honest."

Villard subscribed, but you may rest assured somebody else put up the money. The main contributors to the organization of the Cleveland campaign were Whitney, Villard, ex-Mayor Grace and E. C. Benedict of the Chicago gas trust.

Uncle Jack Morrison.

Uncle Jack comes home greatly improved in health, and can rest assured that one and all are glad to see him again, and hope that at an early date he will have fully recovered.

An unusual offer—the one that's made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Unusual, but made in good faith. It's a reward of $500 for an incurable case of Catarrh. If you have one, the money's for you. But you can't know whether you have one, till you've tried Dr. Sage's Remedy. What's incurable by any other means, yields to that. By its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, it cures the worst cases, no matter of how long standing. That's the reason the money can be offered. There's a risk about it, to be sure. But it's so small that the proprietors are willing to take it. The symptoms of catarrh are, headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, putrid and offensive; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness; offensive breath; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. Only a few of these symptoms likely to be present at once.
