

National Republican Ticket.

FOR PRESIDENT, BENJAMIN HARRISON, of Indiana.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT, WHITELEW REID, of New York.

FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS, J. E. CAPLES, of Portland. H. B. MILLER, of Grant's Pass. G. M. IRWIN, of Union. D. M. DUNNE, of Portland.

That the present industrial order may meet with sweeping changes in the future may be granted, says the Review. But no industrial change will put brains in the head of a fool or prudence in the conduct of a spendthrift. Poverty is not to be abolished by act of congress, but by individual exertion, and not always then. Its abolishment is an iridescent dream. So long as there are inequalities among men, and there always will be, just so long will there be differences in their conditions. Where one man is frugal and another prodigal, one man thrifty and another idle, one man wise and another simple, one man saving and another wasteful one man sober and another vicious, there must be differences of reward proportioned to their industry and economy. No legislative legardeman can alter these facts, no readjustment of the social structure, no cunning jugglery of the reformer, will circumvent this, the degree of nature.

It is mere folly for labor organizations to talk about boycotting Carnegie steel. Such a thing is too absurd to think about. To boycott the steel would necessitate boycotting nearly every dealer in hardware or implements and every user of machinery in the United States. The men would be much better if they had displayed the wisdom of the workmen in a similar establishment in Illinois, who were doing the same kind of work and receiving the same pay. They say: "We like to see our employer make money. It is to our interest for him to do so. We are better paid than men in similar positions in any other part of the world; our families are well cared for. No, sir; we have no disposition to strike, but prefer to leave well enough alone." These men know when they are well off.

There is a decided dullness in the wheat market on this coast, and the general opinion among the dealers is that the price will be very low for some little time, or until reports can be obtained from other counties. None of the dealers seem to be anxious to buy although the market in the east and in England seems to be firm at the prices quoted. In the valley about sixty-five to sixty-eight cents on board the cars in Eugene is all the dealers seem justified in giving. It is hoped the market will be better later in the season.

General Weaver thinks the republican party is dead. There are no degrees of deadness, since one object can not be dead than another, but there are degrees of liveliness, says the Review, and this professional candidate will find the republican corpse about the liveliest that he ever ran afoul of. In fact it will very complacently attend the funeral of the third party just as it has those of a dozen other third parties in its day and generation.

Some of the papers in eastern Washington are publishing records of big wheat yields for the season. A farm in Whitman county heads the list with a return of eighty-two bushels and eleven pounds of red chaff wheat to the acre. A farmer in the same county threshed seventy acres of wheat and got from it 4,000 bushels, while eight acres of oats on the same farm gave ninety-two bushels to the acre.

A specimen weighing seventy-five pounds now on exhibition at the Redding bank, covered with gold visible to the naked eye, is causing great excitement among mining men in Shasta county. It was taken from the bottom of an 80-foot shaft in an old Tellurium claim, worked many years ago.

At Pullman the wheat market opened at fifty-four and fifty-seven cents, the latter price being offered for sacked wheat. Farmers generally hope for better prices soon.

The prohibitionists have placed a ticket in the field in Walla Walla county. There will be four tickets in that county this year.

A ranch near Cayuse station yielded fifteen thousand sacks of wheat and averaging about twenty bushels to the acre. The grain in that section is said to be of fine quality.
