JUDGE NELSON'S DECISION.

Speaking of patent medicines, the Judge says: "I wish to deal fairly and honorably with all, and when I find an article that will do what it is recommended to do, I am not ashamed to say so. I am acquainted with Dr. Vanderpool (having been treated by him for cancer), and have used his blood medicine, known as the S. B. Headache and Liver Cure, and while I am 75 years old, and have used many pills and other remedies for the blood, liver and kidneys, I must say that for a kidney tonic in Bright's disease, and as an alternative for the blood, or to correct the action of the stomach and bowels, it is a very superior remedy, and beats anything I ever tried."

Messages of Sympathy to the President From all Parts.

THE PRESIDENT IN HIS SORROWS

Public Business Transacted as Usual by His Special Request.

CABINET MEMBERS AT THE DESKS

Solemn Surroundings—Leaves Have Their Time to Fall—The Flowers She Loved so Well.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—The president is bearing up remarkably well under his affliction. Traces of great sorrow are plain, but he has nerved himself to face his affliction with fortitude. Those who saw him this morning found his eyes red with weeping and his voice broken with emotion, but he constantly endeavored to repress its influence. Messages of sympathy are pouring in upon him. All the members of the immediate families are here. Carter Harrison, of Tennessee, and Mrs. Harrison's only brother, John Scott, of Port Townsend, Wash., will probably not come to Washington, but go direct to Indianapolis.

Such members of the cabinet as were in the city called this morning and had a conference with the president. He expressed a wish that the public business be transacted as usual, and the members of the cabinet were therefore at their desks most of the day. Such of them as can be spared will accompany the remains to Indianapolis.

The president is averse to having the White House flag displayed at half-mast, so it was not placed on the staff this morning as usual. Flags on the public buildings are at half-mast. A plain black crape knot on the White House door is the only outward symbol of mourning.

Very cold and dreary appeared the white facade of the president's home in the chill, frosty air of a gray and misty autumn morning. The watchmen paced their beats at the gates, the grounds were deserted and the only sound was that made by the rustling of the sere and yellow leaves, which dropped from the stately elms and oaks at every light puff of air upon the green sward already so thickly carpeted. Mrs. Harrison has died with the leaves and flowers she loved so well, and her life had ebbed away at that inspiring hour of the night which precedes the first flush of dawn, when the blood runs slowly and nature itself seems to almost suspend its function.

ALASKA VOLCANO LOCATED.

Ashes From It Brought to Prof. Davidson by Lieut. Cantwell.

The active volcano on the peninsula of Alaska, which has been recently reported as being in violent eruption, covering the land and sea for hundreds of miles with ashes and volcanic dust, has at last been definitely located by Lt. Cantwell, of the United States revenue marine service, who has recently returned from a cruise of several months in Behring sea. During his stay in the waters of Alaska he obtained much information of value bearing on the topography and general condition of the Alaskan coast. He made a report of his discovery in relation to the great volcano on the Alaskan peninsula to Prof. Davidson, of the United States geodetic survey. Accompanying his report was a package of ashes or volcanic dust thrown out by the crater and collected by him from the deck of the Richard Rush, on which it settled.

The volcano has hitherto been reported as being an eruption of Pabloff mountain. This report came from Chignik bay and from vessels that were cruising many miles to the westward of the bay. Lt. Cantwell says that the volcanic mountain is in reality the volcano of Wenjaminow, and not Pabloff. It is located on the peninsula to the west and north of Chignik bay, in latitude 56 deg. 5 min., longitude 159 deg. It stands near a series of lakes lying on the peninsula, of which the northern lake finds an outlet into Behring sea and the southern lake discharges into Ivanoff bay, on the southern side of the peninsula.

Wenjaminow, or Benjamin, as it is translated, is named after the former Archbishop of Alaska, who made a report of its existence fifty years ago. He states in his narrative that it was throwing out a column of smoke from the year 1830 to 1840. Agent Applegate, formerly of the Alaska Commercial company, also saw the volcano while recently in Ivanoff bay hunting for sea-otter. He saw the eruption, with the flames and columns of smoke thrown to a great height in the air. Applegate made a report of the circumstances to Lt. Cantwell, who was fortunate enough to see and distinguish the mountain plainly, a few days later, from Chignik bay.

The package of volcanic ashes which he gave to Prof. Davidson is a very fine powder without a trace of grit. It is of a dark slate color and so light that it readily floats on water for quite a length of time. This volcanic dust is carried as far as 250 or 300 miles out to sea, covering the surface of the water so heavily as to make it appear like a heaving sea of ashes. The Richard Rush sailed through this ash-covered water for three days, during which time the dust continued to fall, covering her thickly. Through it the sun lost its brilliancy and took on a whitish appearance like the moon. The air was so heavily laden with it that it became extremely difficult for one to breathe. Wenjaminow has been in a state of eruption, throwing out fire, rock and ashes, for several months past, and when seen by Lt. Cantwell showed no signs of quieting down.

THE FISHING SEASON.

A Legal Question Involving the Limits of Its Duration for a Year.

Suit has begun in the United States circuit court by the Fook Wa Company, of Portland, against I. H. Taffe, of Celilo to recover $3,000. The trouble is all about a misunderstanding in regard to what period of time constitutes "the fishing of 1892." The Oregonian says the Fook Wa company contracted with Mr. Taffe to pack his entire catch of salmon for the fishing of 1892, and he agreed that there should be at least 10,000 cases for them to pack. Up to the beginning of the close season the catch was light, and they only had to pack 2,250 cases. Then they claimed that the season was at an end, and demanded their pay for packing the whole 10,000 cases, which Mr. Taffe had contracted to provide. He claimed that the fishing season of 1892 was not ended, but would continue through the fall catch, after the end of the close season. As soon as the close season was at an end he resumed operations, and caught and had put up, by another gang of Chinese, more than enough fish to make up the 10,000 cases he contracted to furnish. It now remains for the courts to decide whether it includes the time when fish can be caught up to New Year's.

The Mount Adams Mines.

Spokane Review. A. N. McAllister, of the New York Mutual, has returned to the city from Goldendale, where he spent a month on business connected with his company. He brought back some samples of tellurite of gold and silver which he will assay as high as $2,700 a ton. The ore was taken from the Mount Adams district, and is found in an almost inaccessible location in the foot-hills about forty miles south of Mt. Adams. He thinks that when the country is opened up a great deal of rich silver and gold ore will be discovered in that hitherto unknown section. The snow is already deep in the vicinity of the property, but a number of prospectors will make an attempt to go into the mines yet this fall. The ore that Mr. McAllister brought to Spokane with him was taken from the surface and has excited very favorable comment from old miners who have seen it.

Chicago Horse Market.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—J. S. Cooper commission salesman of horses, Union Stock Yards, says: The week ending to-day has been very unsatisfactory for everything except very heavy draft horses. Small horses, drivers, streeters, etc., were very weak and hard sellers at prices 15 to 25 per cent below the prevailing prices of the past month. There is no encouragement and less hope for the present, as all eastern markets are glutted; 1600 to 1700-lb horses for pinery work are on the contrary in fairly good demand at good prices.

AMERICAN TIN PLATE.

Col. Conger Says America Will Soon Produce her own Supply.

Produce her own Supply.

WHAT HE SAW VISITING IN EUROPE

He Spent Two Weeks in Wales Examining Tin Plate Plants.

THE QUESTION IS WAGES AND MEN

Where Block Tin Can Be Had If We Want it on a Par With all Europe—Other News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Among the passengers on the White Star line steamer Germanic, from Liverpool, were Col. A. L. Conger and wife of Akron, O. Col. Conger, who is president of the American tin plate company, spent a fortnight in Wales, examining various tin-plate plants, and he comes home convinced that within two years America will make all the tin-plate that will be required and at less than the average market price of the last five years. In an interview, Col. Conger said: "If America should not produce a single ton of pig tin it would be no disadvantage to her, as, of the 54,000 tons produced in 1891, Cornwall produced 9,000 tons, Australia 6,000 tons, Saxony 1,500 tons and the South sea islands the remainder. We can produce block plates as cheaply as Wales can. We get tin in the South seas at an equal advantage with England. The chief question is of workmanship and wages. Metal workmen here are paid the highest wages received in Europe for similar work; yet we pay double the wages paid here, and there will be no difficulty in getting plenty of men. The smartest manufacturers in Wales are removing their plants to America, which is a good move for both countries, relieving the overproduction here and giving us the experienced men and the business we need."

Criticising the Prince.

The fact that the prince of Wales absented himself from the funeral of Lord Tennyson, in order that he might attend the Newmarket races, has provoked considerable comment in England. His action is especially dilated upon by certain radical journals, which appear anxious to make a sensation similar to that occasioned by the bacarat scandal in which the prince was involved. The prince of Wales accompanied by the duke of Cambridge, visited Newmarket on that day and saw the race for the Cesarewitch stakes. He was made the object of a popular ovation when his horse won the Nursery plate, a handicapper of 200 sovereigns. His absence from Westminster abbey would have been less remarked upon but for the fact that not a single royal personage was present at the funeral, though, as the defenders of the royal family strongly emphasize, they were represented by two generals and two colonels, besides numerous splendid wreaths. Since the Tranby Croft affair public opinion has been very sensitive in regard to the conduct of the prince of Wales, but the public takes a very common-sense view of the prince's present action. The efforts being made to arouse feeling against him will fall flat. It is generally felt that his partiality for the lighter side of national life is so marked that to show deep regret over the death of Lord Tennyson would be mere hypocrisy. Those agitating against his absence, however, contend that his presence was necessary, not as an expression of personal feeling but as the next head of the nation assisting at a national event.

The Chronicle says it is true the prince went where the mass of the people went. Tennyson was never the people's poet, but the point is whether in the hearts of the people they really prefer a prince who cannot postpone a day's shooting or racing in order to mark a great epoch in his mother's reign.
