A Cholera Scare.

A reported outbreak of cholera at Helmetta, N. J., created much excitement in that vicinity. Investigation showed that the disease was not cholera but a violent dysentery, which is almost as severe and dangerous as cholera.

Notice.

By Order of the Common Council of Dalles City, made and entered on the 12th day of October, 1902, notice is hereby given that said city council is about to proceed to order and make improvements in streets in said city.

The improvement contemplated and about to be made is as follows, to-wit: To improve Washington, Fulton and Laughlin streets in said city, by constructing a sewer of terra-cotta, from the Columbia river at the foot of said Washington street, and running thence south on said Washington street to the junction of said street with Fulton street, and running thence easterly on said Fulton street, to the junction of said Fulton street with Laughlin street, and running thence southerly along said Laughlin street, to the alley next south of Alvord street, said sewer to be of twelve inch terra-cotta pipe from the point of beginning, above mentioned to the alley between Fourth and Fifth streets, and of ten inch terra-cotta pipe from said place, to the terminal above stated.

When Hot Springs Were First Discovered.

America had been discovered and the colonies were feeling their way toward the Pacific ocean. In the vanguard was the famous expedition of Lewis and Clarke, which went overland to the mouth of the River Columbia. John Colter was a hunter in this expedition, and by some chance he went across the mountains on the old trail of the Nez Perces Indians which leads across the divide from the Missouri waters to those of the Columbia.

When he came back from the Nez Perces trail he told most wonderful tales of what he had seen at the head of the Missouri. There were cataraacts of scalding water which shot straight up into the air; there were blue ponds hot enough to boil fish; there were springs that came up snorting and steaming, and which would turn trees into stone; the woods were full of holes from which issued streams of sulphur; there were canyons of untold depth with walls of ashes full of holes which let out steam like a locomotive, and there were springs which looked peaceful enough, but which at times would burst like a bomb.

Every one laughed at Colter and his yarns, and this place was familiarly known as "Colter's Hell." But for once John Colter told the truth, and the truth could not easily be exaggerated. But no one believed him. When others who afterward followed him over the Nez Perces trail told the same stories, people said they had been up to "Colter's Hell" and had learned to lie. - David Starr Jordan in Popular Science Monthly
