Plain Salmon Talk.

A fisherman, writing upon the sub-U. S. engineers, for an open river. They ject of protecting salmon, shows up "the very idea" which we have contended for for years; that the natural spawning beds of the Chinook salmon are the sands in Astoria harbor and about Sand Island; and that the spawn is annually almost wholly destroyed by the lead lines of the fishermen's nets. We are glad to get this admission from such high source. It goes far toward sustaining the idea that, in order to protect salmon every device should be done place as rector of St. Paul's (Episcopal) care less. Chicago Horse Market.

J. S. Cooper, commission salesman of horses, Union stock yards, Chicago, says:

The past week has been a repetition of the two previous ones, viz: A fairly good demand at fair prices for extra heavy horses with a practically dead market at very low prices for small common horses. The outlook is neither inviting nor encouraging. And the only ray of comfort is that all other markets
