The Quickest Way to Cure a Cold.
Do you wish to know the quickest way to cure a cold? We will tell you. To cure a cold quickly, it must be treated before the cold has become settled in the system. The first symptoms of a cold is a dry, loud cough and sneezing. The cough is soon followed by watery expectoration and the sneezing by a profuse watery discharge from the nose. In severe cases there is a thin white coating on the tongue. What to do? It is only necessary to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in double doses every hour. That will greatly lessen the severity of the cold and in many cases will effectually counteract it, and cure what would have been a severe cold within one or two days time. Try it and be convinced. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists.

NOTICE.
All Dalles City warrants registered prior to May 1, 1891, will be paid if presented at my office. Interest ceases from and after this date.

ELECTRICITY IN WAR
ELECTRICIANS WILL PLAY AN IMPORTANT PART IN BATTLE.
Electrical Appliances on Shipboard May Get Out of Order So Frequently as to Render Necessary the Presence of a Corps of Electricians.
So far as the stationary torpedoes are concerned, methods are quite well settled and the practice has been reduced to a science, one, however, which requires a good deal of electrical skill for its proper application. The automobile torpedo involves problems that are a worthy subject for the exercise of the highest electrical skill. So far as the Whitehead and similar missiles of destruction are concerned, there is not much to be done, electrically speaking, for a torpedo of that class is purely a missile discharged from a gun, but supplied with means for continuing its course to an efficient distance under water.
Inasmuch as a high initial velocity does not agree with powerful explosives, the falling off in velocity would be too marked if any long range were attempted. With dirigible torpedoes, however, the case is very different. Then one must depend on electricity for steering if not for motive power, and there is room for considerable improvement both in speed and certainty of operation, two prime essentials. But the function of the electrician is by no means ended with torpedo service, for in the equipment of any modern man-of-war the electrical apparatus plays a very important part. The modern gun, twenty to forty feet in length, with corresponding weight, cannot be handled by man power as quickly as the exigencies of service sometimes require, and the choice lies between electricity on the one hand and hydraulic machinery or donkey engines on the other. The latter have been very freely in use; the former has made its influence felt often enough to show that it is fully up to its work. The electric motor is undoubtedly better suited to such sort of work than any other kind of mechanism.
THE SEARCH LIGHT.
Since the introduction of secondary batteries every bit of working mechanism is exposed to a formidable fire, and must be protected at all hazards. Here the motor, from its very small size, offers a particularly difficult target, and besides can be ensconced behind the gun shield or even behind the gun itself, so that nothing short of a blow sufficient to disable the latter would cripple the motor, and in addition the means of communicating power to the said motor are very unobtrusive and exceedingly easy to duplicate.
It is a perfectly simple matter to supply it through half a dozen different circuits in parallel with each other, all of which would have to be shot off before the motor went even temporarily out of use. Even then an electric wire can be handled with such ease and rapidity that temporary communication would be re-established very readily although under fire, while if a steam or water pipe were shot away there would be no replacing it during action.
The search light, too, comes in for its share of attention, both as a weapon of defense and offense, and more attention should be given it than has yet been done. The destruction of a search light during a torpedo attack would be a very serious calamity, and when one remembers that torpedo boats are usually supplied with rapid fire guns, such a possibility is by no means remote.
DANGER FROM RAPID FIRING GUNS.
From a 37-millimeter revolving cannon—a size frequently used for the purpose—nearly a shot a second can be fired, and at half or three-fourths of a mile the accuracy of this weapon is so great as to render hits quite probable, and a single projectile or a fragment of a shell would stand a good chance of putting a search light out of use. All this points to a reduplication of the apparatus on a considerably more extended scale than has usually been the habit, and besides all this there is a question of communication between different parts of the ship, and especially with the conning tower, and here, as everywhere, the convenience of electricity, the readiness with which circuits can be multiplied and re-established make its use almost imperative.
