E. JACOBSEN & CO.

Mr. S. R. Husbands of Mosier, is in the city.

R. R. Byran prepared for a trip to Antelope today, but reconsidered the move and didn't go.

We are pleased to note that Mr. Edwin Mays who was prevented by illness from returning to college Saturday is better today.

A gang of counterfeiters of the most dangerous class, were captured in San Francisco Saturday night by N. R. Harris, secret service agent of the government.

Senator Steiwer introduced a joint resolution urging congress to make some effort to extend the time for making final proof in all cases under the railway forfeiture act. It passed both branches of the assembly on the 10th, and is now in Washington, perhaps.

Henry Villard says he will not be a member of Mr. Cleveland's cabinet: that his business interests precluded that. Now, it is to be hoped the next time he goes to Washington and talks with Vilas or any other man, that he will not be accused of lying, by some scoop reporter.

Get your old locks out and have them ready for inspection. A cotemporary says one of the special committees: To visit jetties at mouth of Columbia and locks at The Dalles is representatives Durham, Nichols, Elmore, and senators Cross and Veatch. Any kind of a lock will do for The Dalles inspection except it be an aburn.

The hand of the U. P. R. Co., appears in the movement for the proposed county of Hood River. Last week the Glacier gave the snap dead away. In a local item the visit of Zera Snow, U. P. R. attorney, and Mr. McCoy of Omaha, is noted; and in another column the paper speaks of a capitalist "there yesterday" anxious to put up $25,000 for real estate, "providing that the county was divided." There is the least reason in the project for Hood River county of any yet proposed. The people there are within an hour of the county seat by railway at any time, and can leave home after the mid-day meal, returning home for their tea, at the mere cost of travel. They propose to take out of the county with them $300,000 worth of railway property, leaving to take its place an additional 5-mills tax on all property. Then there is no justice in the boundary lines proposed, coming within seven miles of The Dalles. Why not go the other way, within seven miles of Portland?

According to the great daily in the big city the "scrub-press" of Oregon should have nothing to say about the jute-mill project. When that great oracle of monopoly speaks, however, then the world must smile an audible acceptance to its wise sayings; such, for instance, as this: "If the state would erect a large stockade and put inside of it several hundred tons of gravel, and then employ the convicts every working day in the year in wheeling this gravel first to one side of the enclosure and then the other, the penitentiary problem would be solved with less cost to the state than if an attempt were made to erect and operate jute bagmills." If that paragraph, silly as it is, does not prove the Oregonian to stand in with the convict labor contract monopoly, what else does it show? Aw were staggered to read such a remark med bi won sohas 'e is. Sooa seen' as 'ow 'e is so hawful smart, mebbe he'll happen bring in a bill to remedy th' state o' things; nubbutthese chaps wod sooner gas abeawt wod they're beawn to do nor ged id done, which is th' custom o' thad profession.

The Walla Walla Statesman recalls the fact that in 1861 snow fell to the depth of three feet all over that valley, remaining on for three months. Those were the days when cattle were expected to rustle their own living on the range, and no preparation was ever made for a hard winter. The consequence was that fully three-fourths of the cattle in the valley died, being unable to reach the bunch grass through the deep snow.

Oregon sympathizes with Senator Mitchell in the death of his son-in-law, Wm. R. Handy, in Washington, D. C. His illness was quick consumption, and his death removes one of the most popular young men of the capital. Mr. Handy leaves a beautiful wife and two lovely children. His life has been despaired of for some time, and the efforts of the best physicians in New York and Washington were unavailing. The widow, as well as the senator, and Hiram Mitchell, who is now in Portland, will receive the sympathy, in their bereavement, of a large number of friends, both in Oregon and Washington.

In Umatilla on Saturday a young white fellow attempted to steal a pair of gloves from an Indian, and the incident came near causing an outbreak among the 300 Columbia river Indians camped near there. The Indian was peddling squaw-made gloves and while displaying his goods to a crowd of young men, one slipped a pair into his pocket. This enraged the Indian, and after making repeated demands for the return of the property, he went away. He presently returned with a dozen more fighting mad. They marched up and down the street, threatening to bring all the Indians over and wipe out the town, unless the gloves were returned. For a short time it looked as if there would be trouble, as their savage blood was at a fever heat. They finally located the young man, and scored him into giving over the gloves, and then went away, apparently satisfied.

A Terrible Accident.

The Sunday wood train out of Portland on the narrow gauge was derailed by a fallen tree across the track yesterday, and sixteen men were badly injured. The train ran off a trestle on both sides, after striking the tree. So great was the impetus with which the locomotive struck that it smashed some of the ties together over on one side, the seven flat cars attached following, and the caboose on the other side, making a complete revolution, and landing right side up with such force that it was burst completely to pieces. The passengers were thrown from one side to the other of the car as it rolled over, crashing against each side in turn and landing in a heap on the bottom. The locomotive was badly smashed and went about half-way out of sight in the mud. The brakes having been applied at the rear of the train, the seventeen flat cars behind the caboose remained on the track.

Miller's fishery bill will probably become a law, and if a permanent ladder is blasted out of the rocks at Oregon city, will be the means of doing very much good. To secure the best results there should be a clause in the act prohibiting wholesale slaughter of the salmon after they have passed over the falls. The upper Willamette, under such conditions would then become the natural home of the royal chinook.

Cordray opens tonight with the new melodrama, "Blow for Blow." It has an intricate and well-constructed plot, abounding in interesting situations and thrilling climax. There is also a fine vein of comedy running through it.

Public Installation.

Fraternity hall was comfortably filled on Saturday evening by those who had gathered to witness the installation of the officers of Jas. W. Nesmith Post, G. A. R., and of the Womens Relief Corps. The installation of the ladies took the precedence, the beautiful and impressive ceremonies being conducted by Mrs. Mary S. Myers. So soon as the officers of the Relief Corps were installed the ceremonies of the G. A. R. commenced, and the newly elected officers were soon formally inducted into the active duties of their respective positions. The installing officer of the G. A. R. was W. S. Myers. At the close of the installing ceremonies Rev. W. H. Wilson delivered a short and stirring address to the assembled corps and post, filled with touching reminiscences and allusions to war times. A few remarks from Mr. J. M. Patterson, the newly-elected commander of the post, closed the exercises. The officers of the Relief Corps installed were: President, Mrs. Alice Varney; Sen Vice, Mrs. Mary Learned; Jun Vice, Mrs. Lizzie Ulrich; Chaplain, Mrs. Julia Chandler; Sec, Mrs. Blanche Patterson; Treas, Mrs. Belle Burget; Conductor, Mrs. Mary Nichols; Guard, Mrs. Lavina Lemison; Asst Conductor, Mrs. Sarah Bunch; Asst Guard, Mrs. M. McDonald. The officers of the post were: Commander, J. M. Patterson; Jun V. C. R. L. Aikin; Surgeon, H. H. Learned; Chaplain, Rev. W. H. Wilson; Q. M., E. N. Chandler; Adjutant, C. H. Brown; O. G., Comrade Baker; S. M., J. Lemison.

Daring Burglary.

Shortly after dusk Saturday evening, as one of our citizens was sitting in his office closing his day's work, the door was suddenly opened, and confronted by two hard looking characters he was ordered to turn over his valuables, and before he could move or even call for assistance, a pair of arms seized him round the neck and held him in a clinging embrace while her accomplice rifled his pockets. They fortunately (for themselves) missed the pocket which contained his purse, fearing, perhaps, that it might contain a pistol; but they secured his watch and chain. The parties are known, and if the articles taken are returned no questions will be asked. The citizen does not object so much to embraces; but when they result in a loss of valuables, with no return but a mitten, which was inadvertently left behind, he thinks he should remonstrate.

Let's reason together. Here's a firm, one of the largest the country over, the world over; it has grown, step by step, through the years to greatness, and it sells patent medicines!—ugh! "That's enough!"—Wait a little. This firm pays the newspapers good money (expensive work, this advertising!) to tell the people that they have faith in what they sell, so much faith that if they can't benefit or cure they don't want your money. Their guarantee is not indefinite and relative, but definite and absolute—if the medicine doesn't help your money is "on call." Suppose every sick man and every feeble woman tried these medicines and found them worthless, who would be the loser, you or they? The medicines are Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" for blood diseases, and his "Favorite Prescription" for woman's peculiar ills. If they help toward health, they cost $1.00 a bottle each! If they don't, they cost nothing!
