THE BELLS BENEATH THE SEA.

The sea is calm, the wind is fair. Not over a cloud doth lower.

"Thank God! the harbor's near. For vesper bells at Tintagel Ring out their music clear.

"Aye, thank the Lord for our good speed Across the doubtful sea!" "Fool!" sneered the captain, "thank thyself; God holds no helm for thee."

The pilot crossed his breast, and cried, "God pardon thee once more, And grant that we may safely come Unto the Cornish shore."

The captain's oath was on his lips. Or ever the sun went down, And while the people thronged the cliffs Above the harbor town, A mighty wave swept o'er the sea, With dull and sullen roar; The good ship trembled all her length As she sank to rise no more.

Then o'er the whelming waters pealed (As tolling funeral knells For those lost souls) the soft, sweet chimings Of the Forrabury bells.

The moss creeps over Boltreux church. Where rings no vesper lay; Still waits the tower its blessed bells. And silent stands today.

For low beneath the Cornish wave, Where tangled wrecks lie deep, The Forrabury bells are hid, And their sweet echoes keep. But ever 'gainst the billows toss, And storm winds shriek in glee; Their muffled chimings the blessed bells Still ring beneath the sea.

Lucy R. Fleming in Harper's Bazar.

Air Plovers.

A V shaped contrivance, to be placed on the front of engines of fast express trains, is the latest scheme to get more speed, by overcoming much of the natural resistance of the air to the front of the locomotive.

The plow extends from a few inches above the track to the top of the smokestack, the sharp edge of course in front. "Shoveling fog" is a common expression among railroad men, but plowing wind is a new thing in railroad agriculture.—English Mechanic.
