

To Our Friends and Patrons.

WE HAVE rather neglected our Advertising of late, not because we had nothing to sell; but we had nothing especially new to offer, and preferred to wait until we could say something of interest. We are, and have been for some time, busily engaged in placing our orders for Spring and Summer Goods and feel justified in announcing that we shall have the FINEST ASSORTMENT and the BEST GOODS in all our lines that has ever been seen in The Dalles. We have secured some genuine novelties in the Dry Goods Department, and the ladies will certainly consult their best interests by deferring their purchases until after their arrival, of which we shall give you due notice. Keep both eyes on this space and we will certainly surprise you, not only with the goods, but the prices at which we shall sell them. We mean business and propose to have your patronage, if LOW PRICES and the BEST GOODS will accomplish it. Yours Respectfully,

The Telegram says those fellows in the Oregon legislature who object to almost every leading measure and then try to get a bill through of their own, should remember the golden rule: Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.

Southern and Middle California are flooded by the late rains. Kern river near Bakersfield, broke over its banks and is rushing through the streets of that city. The Southern Pacific road is badly washed out and many freight trains are wrecked. Kern river has taken its old course followed up to 1868. In middle California the late storms have caused a great deal of loss of property through floods.

Condon Globe says the news of Cal Hale's conviction is a great surprise to us all. Our people are all asking themselves the question: "Can it be possible that Cal is guilty, when so many witnesses testified to seeing him in this county on the very day the robbery was committed?" The general impression seems to prevail that had the Fossil and Arlington papers not had so much to say in the matter, the boy would have had a better case. It sometimes turns out very poor judgment for newspapers to try a case before the court does.

Last evening, as Mr. S. A. Johns and father were going home in their cutter, drawn by a spirited black roadster, just as they were approaching Union street on Third, the animal became unmanageable and used his hind feet without ceremony, and the consequence was the gentlemen were precipitated into the snow, but held fast to the lines, and by giving the horse some well directed blows on his nose stopped his manueverings and thus quieted his reckless spirit. Messrs. Johns were compelled to foot it home followed by the horse.

The Oregon legislature closes its arduous labors next week, with the exception of a few important bills passed, the session has been fruitless of any good so far, it is cursed with several "objectors and obstructionists" that would do their country more good by retiring into the shades of obscurity.

There are a great many classes of people who do a town no good, and they might be enumerated as follows: First, those who go to some other town to do their trading; second, those opposing improvement and public expenditure; third, those who prefer a quiet town to one of push and business; fourth, those who imagine they own the town and can run everything as they please; fifth, those who think business can be done slyly, without advertising; sixth, those who deride public-spirited men; seventh, those who oppose every movement that does not promise to benefit them personally; eighth, those who seek to injure the good name and credit of their fellow citizens.—Ex.

Last evening the Mignonette Club at its weekly meeting gave a club party that was largely enjoyed by the members. About twenty-five couples were present; the ladies without exception nicely arrayed in many colored calico costumes, while among the gentlemen calico ties were in profusion, though a few had rigged themselves out in complete calico costumes, and appeared much like butterflies out of season. The programs were quite unique, and ingeniously devised. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Maier and Mrs. F. L. Houghton, Senator and Mrs. Chas. Hilton, Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Snedaker, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Crowe, Mesdames G. C. Blakeley, M. French, H. Heppner and H. RANCH, Feb. 8th, 1893.

To THE CHRONICLE:
Thinking perhaps you would like to receive a few words from this isolated portion of old Wasco in regard to the stock interests, I concluded to drop you a few lines.

We are now feeding all our sheep, about 10,000, to hay, and have been for the last two weeks. Have fed in all this winter about three weeks, and the prospect is very good at present for about three weeks more. Our sheep are doing first class; haven't lost any as yet, more than the usual mortality among so many sheep, none having died from the effects of the winter. We have on hand at present about 200 tons of feed, enough I think to last for quite a while yet. All my neighboring sheepmen, from what I can hear, are feeding, and all have an abundance of feed for quite a siege yet.

The snow is drifted and piled up in such a shape that it is almost impossible to tell just how deep it is on a level. It is blown off the range so that with a very little warm wind there will be lots of bare ground. The thermometer stands today at 30 degrees above zero, but it has been down to 12 degrees below.

There are quite a good many cattle on the range not being fed, a number of which have died already, and a good many more will die before long if the weather doesn't change. Horses are all right up to date.

ARTESIAN WELLS.

Water Struck at the Depth of 500 Feet on the Colorado Desert.

We learn from T. B. Wilkinson, agent of the Southern Pacific railroad at this place, says the Yuma (A. T.) Sentinel, that success has at last crowned the efforts of the company to obtain artesian water on the desert. On Tuesday last, when the great well at Walker's station, 106 miles west of Yuma, had reached a depth of 500 feet, a bonny stream of excellent water was struck, which instantly rose four feet above the surface and ran off down the desert as freely as if it had always done so. Such was the flow of water that the company was obliged at once to protect its road bed from being washed away. Passengers passing by yesterday and the day before say that the stream filled a good-sized irrigation ditch. The water is clear, bold and excellent for drinking and cooking purposes.

Engineer W. B. Story, jr., and other officials of the company consider this as one of the most promising and valuable discoveries of the company for years, as it settles the question as to securing artesian water irrigation and other purposes on the great desert adjacent to Idaho and Salton. It also confirms the opinion of a gentleman who was in Yuma two years ago, who had been connected with the artesian well system of the English government in India for thirteen years, and who said: "I am confident that an abundant supply of artesian water can be had at almost any point in the Salton desert or in the section lying adjacent to Yuma, and you will not have to bore 1,000 feet to get it."

The Walters well is eight feet in diameter, and the water rises from three to four feet above the surface. The company will not prosecute the work on its proposed wells in other sections. If it proves that good water can be had in other sections of the desert, it will put the ditch and canal builders on their mettle to compete with this supply of water for irrigation purposes.

The Fossil Journal of the 10th has the epitome of the testimony given in the Cal Hale trial at Ellensburg in the bank robbery case, and prefacing it says: "Our readers are so thoroughly acquainted with the Koslyn bank robbery case, and the manner in which our county has been connected with it, that there is no need of going over the ground again. Suffice it for us to say that Cal Hale was the first man tried, and that he was found guilty by a jury composed of twelve citizens of Kittitas county, Washington. The prosecuting lawyer presented a train of circumstantial evidence to the jury, and they evidently preferred to take that in preference to the positive testimony of Oregon citizens, whom the jury, by their verdict, find guilty of grossest perjury."

How Jewish Meat is Killed.

One of the largest abattoirs of the city of New York, covering an ample block, owned and operated by men of Jewish race and faith, is remarkable for its smooth and effective working and admirable distribution of parts. An average of 800 cattle, between three and five years old, pass through it in each of the business days of the year. Arriving from the west at the river front, they ascend one by one to the fatal inclosure, where an adept employee fastens a chain around the hind leg of each.

Hoisted by machinery, the bovine falls gently upon one shoulder, and in most instances without a cry. Occasionally, however, some brute, maddened by sight and smell of blood, breaks out into the slaughter house and creates disturbance that is speedily quelled by its own dispatch. Submissive companions, with neck twisted to expose the throat, quickly feel the shochet's long and shining knife. The shochet himself is a stalwart fellow, cool and wary withal, who rarely makes a useless motion. He is a religious man and of good moral character, as his license from Rabbi Jacob Joseph, chief of certain orthodox congregations in the metropolis, avouches.

The life stream in torrents follows the movement of his blade. This is "shechita," the killing. It insures complete effusion of blood, in which may be germs of disease that otherwise might find entrance into human bodies. Next follows "bedinah," the examination of instrument and victim. If a nick appear on the keen edge of the knife, that by extremists is held to imply unnecessary suffering, injurious chemical change and consequent unfitness of the carcass for market. If there be none, lungs, liver and heart, the entire body, indeed, are minutely inspected.—Century.

How to Use an Umbrella.

"Certainly, but you don't need any," said a salesman in a Chapel street store recently to a customer who had just bought an umbrella, and who had asked for a rubber ring.

"But I want to keep the ends of the ribs from spreading when the umbrella is rolled up," and the customer held up for inspection the umbrella he had just rolled.

"Let me show you," said the salesman, as he unfastened the band and shook out the folds. Grasping the stick so that his right hand held the ends of the ribs close to the wood, he began rolling the silk in the curve of his left hand. Whenever he gave the umbrella a turn he kept the ribs in their original position, and when the rolling was complete he held up the umbrella and showed that the metal tips pressed as closely to the stick as if riveted in place.—New Haven Palladium.
