WASHINGTON BOUND

Cleveland and His Party Will Start for the Capital Thursday.

NO SPEECHES WILL BE MADE

Stevenson's Friends Keep the Train
Waiting Half an Hour to Shake Hands.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Feb. 27.—Mr. Cleveland has completed the arrangements for his trip to Washington, but he has not announced his plans. The programme, however, comes from an authoritative source and probably will not be changed. President-elect Cleveland will leave Lakewood on Thursday morning at about 11 o'clock in a special train, consisting of a fast engine, two parlor coaches, a baggage and a dining car. From Lakewood the train will run to Redbank and then to Elizabethport, where it will be switched on to the main line of the New Jersey Central and make an uninterrupted run to Philadelphia. There will be a change of engines here, and the only stop will be made at Baltimore. Orders have been issued to the train dispatchers along the line to sidetrack everything for Mr. Cleveland's train, and if that is done it is expected fast time will be made between Lakewood and Washington.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Feb. 27.—All Bloomington was astir early this morning to bid farewell to Vice-President-elect Stevenson, who was to start on his journey to Washington for the inaugural. Stevenson and his family arrived at the depot at 7:30, but the great crowd would not be denied and it was 8 o'clock before Stevenson could finish the round of hearty handshakes from friends and neighbors, and a great farewell cheer arose as the train pulled out.

John Ruskin, the great lecturer and art critic of London, England, has become an imbecile. He was born in 1819, his father being a London merchant. Physically weak, his mental powers have been remarkably great. His earliest literary efforts appeared when he was only 15. He graduated from Oxford in 1839, and four years later published the first volume of "Modern Painters," criticism of which brought him prominently before the public. He turned his attention to English architecture with a view to reforming it, in which he succeeded in a marked degree. He studied the best architecture of Europe, particularly Venice, and in 1851 published his "Stones of Venice," illustrated by himself. Very popular among his works are "Ethics of the Dust," "A Crown of Wild Olive" and "Sesame and Lilies."

A Brave Engineer's Heroic Deed.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—Unmindful of his own danger, Dominick R. Torpri, a railroad engineer, last night plunged into a deep ice-covered pond at Fairhill station, and, after an awful struggle, succeeded in rescuing little Willie Templin, aged 6, from death. The child, while playing with others, threw a stick on the ice and then attempted to walk out and recover it. When twenty yards from the shore the ice gave way and the child disappeared beneath the surface. At the same instant freight train No. 45 passed along the embankment, at the bottom of which the pond had formed. Engineer Torpri stopped his engine, and, rushing down the steep bank, jumped to the rescue of the drowning boy. Fighting his way through the ice and water, which is fully 15 feet deep, he finally succeeded in reaching the child, and, nearly perished, he was drawn ashore by some of his fellow-trainmen. The child was carried to the residence of Eugene Small, where he had been staying, and was restored to consciousness. The brave engineer was rushed to the hospital on a special train and last night was pronounced out of danger.

Dr. Henry Wheatland Dead.

SALEM, Miss., Feb. 27.—Dr. Henry Wheatland, many years president of the Essex institute, died today aged 81. His brother George Wheatland, died just a week ago. Mr. Wheatland was superintendent of the museum of the East Indian Marine Society from 1837 to 1848, and trustee of the Peabody academy of science, and of the Peabody museum of American archeology and ethnology of Cambridge.

She Married a Chinaman.

NORWICH, Conn., Feb. 28.—Kwai Pahnles, at one time a student in the free academy here, and Miss Elizabeth Standish Jewett, of this city, were yesterday united in marriage at the home of the bride's brother, Professor F. F.

Jewett, in Oberlin, Ohio. Kwai Pahnles is a native of China and was sent here by the government when very young to be educated. He entered the free academy here and became thoroughly Americanized. It was while he was a student here that he became acquainted with Miss Jewett, of Norwich, who is a daughter of the late Dr. Charles Jewett, of Norwichtown, the temperance lecturer. His bride is highly educated and accomplished. The couple will reside in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Tin-Plate Industry.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Special Agent Ayer has submitted another report to the treasury department on the American tin-plate industry. The report shows the total production in tin and terne-plates for the six months ending December 31, 1892, was 30,709,216 pounds, against 2,236,743, pounds produced during the corresponding period of the previous year. The report states that the Temescal tin mine in Southern California, and the Harney Peak mine in South Dakota, have suspended operations, and suggests, inasmuch as it now seems probable the tin mines of this country will not be developed in the near future to the extent that will afford an adequate product of the metal, it is worth while to consider whether or not, in the interest of tin-plate manufacturers, that the law which imposes a duty of four cents per pound, on and after July 1, 1893, on cassiterite and bar block and pig tin, might be advantageously repealed.

Missing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—It is thought that A. R. Church, member of the firm of Dolline & Co., leather dealers, of this city, and Eugene Frost, secretary of McNears' electric street road in Oakland, have been drowned. Both men who live in Oakland, went to Alviso Saturday night to shoot ducks. They hired a small flat-bottomed boat and went out among the tules Sunday morning. They did not return with the boat, which was found bottom up. Church did not appear at his office here this morning, and Frost has not been home. Nothing has been seen or heard of the missing men since they started out hunting.

Thanks not Given.

The appended address of thanks to President Fulton, of the senate was found in the senate chamber today. It was at Senator Cogswell's desk, and it is very likely that gentleman would have read it before adjournment Saturday morning had it not been for Friday night's differences. The address reads:

"The seventeenth biennial session of the legislative assembly of Oregon is now about to close. Our work for good, or ill, is nearly done. Though we have met and mingled together as senators with differences of opinion and with ideas that conflicted upon many positions, our intercourse has been marred by no personal quarrels, no factional feuds and no strifes, and will not leave bitter memories, remorse, nor regrets. Happily, extreme partisan politics seldom had an occasion to disturb our serenity, or interfere with our labors, and therefore, while still holding tenaciously to our political convictions, we can part in the sincerest personal friendship, and with respect for the opinions of each other. This gratifying conclusion of our labors is in a great measure due to the fairness, the wisdom, the forbearance and the goodfellowship of our presiding officer. All these qualities he has constantly exhibited, and has thereby contributed largely to make our labors easy and harmonious, and our session successful. In his trying position he has ever been impartial, courteous and kind, though firm, and is therefore entitled to the thanks of the members of this senate. I therefore move that the thanks of the senate be extended to the Hon. C. W. Fulton, president of the senate, for his uniform courtesy, fairness, firmness, and industry, as its presiding officer during the present session."

Inaugural Address.

New York, Feb. 27.—St. Clair McKelway, editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, has been for several days at Lakewood, N. J. During that time he has had several conferences with President-elect Cleveland. He tonight writes his paper as follows:

"Mr. Cleveland's inaugural address, as president of the United States for the four years from March 4th next, will contain about 1,700 words, and will be more general than specific in character. Mr. Cleveland has carefully written out what he desires to say, but will speak at the inaugural without manuscript. His utterances upon the financial policy, the tariff and economy will be decisive. Confidence in democratic principles as being able to deal with the problems of labor and capital, of sectional divisions and political unrest, will be expressed. The abolition of federal interference with elections in the states will, it is said, be treated as the recognized decision of the people. The pension department, the new navy, a rigorous quarantine and the regulation of immigration will probably receive attention. The president may not refer openly to the question of annexation of Hawaii, but he will take a conservative stand and not act hastily. Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland will go at once to the executive mansion after inauguration, and not to any private residence, as has been stated. President Harrison has had the white house put in admirable condition. He has been in correspondence with Mr. Cleveland, and the latter greatly appreciates the kind, provident and hospitable spirit which the retiring president has shown for the comfort of the family of the incoming executive."

An Unappreciated Verdict.

The jury in the trial of Frank Ohlgeschlager brought in a verdict at 4:20 o'clock Saturday afternoon charging the defendant with murder in the second degree. The jury was out just 55 minutes, and took four ballots. When the verdict was read the murderer's sisters and old father almost collapsed with joy. They fell each upon the other's neck and wept rapturously. Ohlgeschlager himself seemed almost the only wholly indifferent person in the court room. He simply looked about as though an auctioneer had shouted "sold." He did not even appear glad; but with an idiotic gaze when asked what he thought of the verdict, asked what a verdict is. When the word was defined to him he replied that he did not know how he felt, and that his lawyers were handling the case. The murderer will be sentenced tomorrow morning to imprisonment for life.

"Das vas der pest poy I got," said the old, gray-haired father, between his sobs, "and I vas glad he will not be hanged."

Coyote Chase.

Eugene Guard.
The chase advertised to come off at the Stewart race track this afternoon was attended by about seventy-five people in spite of the rain. One coyote had died, leaving but one to answer the roll call, and even this had only three feet to use. There were five or six dogs and they caught the wild animal. Yes, they couldn't help it. A flea can catch a pig if the pen is small enough, and enough fleas can make said pig exceedingly uncomfortable. The sports (?) released the coyote the first time to see the dogs overtake it and five of them kill it. It was a very successful affair.

Joseph V. Dory, of Warsaw, Ill., was troubled with rheumatism and tried a number of different remedies, but says none of them seemed to do him any good; but finally he got hold of one that speedily cured him. He was much pleased with it, and felt sure that others similarly afflicted would like to know what the remedy was that cured him. He states for the benefit of the public that it is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, Druggists.
