The Traveling Man.
Whatever he may have been in the past the traveling man of today occupies a most important position in relation to mercantile affairs. He is numbered by many thousands and represents the interests of many millions. He is found in all classes of business, representing all lines of wares, and his influence upon matters even outside of his own vocation is strongly felt. The traveling man of today, to be successful must, in the first place, be a gentleman in deed and in action. Then he must be possessed of business acumen and tact, be ambitious, active and tireless. He finds it to his interest to keep informed on current topics, and is a storehouse of news and information. He must be pleasing in address and neat in appearance.

All these he is, as he now exists, in the best type. In the drug business the traveler is a very important factor. There are about 1,250 directly connected with the wholesale drug trade of this country, this number not including proprietors, pharmaceutical or druggists' sundries houses. These 1,250 travelers are an expense to the wholesale druggists of about $3,000,000, and we may be sure that if they were not a necessity and of value, commercial salesmen would not exist.—Pharmaceutical Era.

Exploring the Ventriloquist Larynx.
Mr. R. H. Mohr, the ventriloquist, went through a strange experience the other day. In one of the laboratories of the Harvard medical school he submitted to an examination of his throat and chest by a number of physiological experts, to determine what special formations gave him his peculiar powers. The experts are uncommunicative concerning the results of the examination, and Mr. Mohr, who is not a physiologist at all, did not learn much about himself.

"They put mirrors down my throat," he said. "They led me by narrow passages into a dark chamber, and what they did there I don't know. After it was all over they told me that my larynx was flatter than that of other men, and shaped something like a woman's, and also that one of the stops in my throat was drawn downward instead of upward by the connecting muscles."

"I can't make much out of that explanation, but I can make a living out of my peculiar throat just the same." Then he threw his voice under the table and laughed hoarsely.—Boston Herald.

Two Kinds of Courage.
In some of the everyday occurrences of life women exhibit much more moral courage than men. You can see that on the "L" cars if you use your eyes. When a man retains his seat while a woman endeavors to maintain her balance by hanging to a strap in front of him, he generally makes a pretense of not seeing her. If he has a paper with him he will appear to be absorbed in its perusal. If he cannot avail himself of that convenient screen, he will pretend to be engaged in such deep meditation as to be oblivious to all that is going on around him. In one way or another he will betray the fact that his conscience is making a coward of him and that he is trying to cheat it.

It is very different with the average woman. Who that travels much in the "L" cars hasn't seen her often drop her child into a seat that has just been vacated, while women in various stages of weariness are standing up all around her? She has paid no fare for the child; she could very well continue to hold it in her lap; she knows that she is making some woman stand who would otherwise get a seat. But is she abashed? Does she act as if she were ashamed of herself? Does she seek to avoid the glances that are bestowed upon her by hiding her face behind a newspaper? Not a bit of it. She doesn't let her conscience make a coward of her. She looks the people about her square in the eyes without flinching. She says, or rather seems to say, "Well, I know that you don't like it; but what are you going to do about it?"

If this isn't moral courage what would you call it?—New York Herald.

Not the Worst Girl in the World.
Professor Chapman, of Bowdoin college, told the following story at an alumni dinner: "I feel like the little daughter of a friend of mine in Portland. She had just mastered the art of expressing herself in intelligent sentences. One day she had done something for which her mamma had to reprove her. The lady gave her daughter a sound lecture and then told her to go up stairs, alone, in her room, and ask God to forgive her for her error."

A Revolutionary Landmark.

An old Revolutionary landmark that is fast crumbling away, and which for many years has attracted much attention, is the Unruh House, standing south of Gorgas lane, and near the Wingo-hocking creek, Germantown. It was used as a hospital for wounded soldiers after the battle of Germantown. The red brick tiles of the roof, which were imported from Holland, have all disappeared, and the walls are only partially standing. The more modern structure, which was built adjoining about the commencement of this century, is still standing in a good state of preservation, and is at present occupied.—Philadelphia Record.

The Ancient Manufacture of Copper.
The ancient Syrians and Phoenicians are well known to have been active traders in copper, and they manufactured this metal into bronze by melting it with tin. Learned antiquaries assure us that the Phoenicians actually came to England and to Ireland in search of tin for this purpose, and a few years ago some curious bronze articles were found in several of the old mine workings in Cornwall, which are believed to have been left there by that ancient people at a time when no bronze was either made or used in England.—Chambers' Journal.

Imitations of the Eiffel Tower.

The great success of the Eiffel tower, both financially and otherwise, has led to a host of imitations. The Watkin tower, 1,200 feet high, is being designed by Sir Benjamin Baker, and it is to be erected at Wembley park, near Willesden, the foundation being nearly completed. The cost is estimated at £300,000, of which £70,000 has been subscribed privately. The Blackpool tower has been designed by Messrs. Maxwell & Tuke, and the contract has been let to Messrs. Heenan & Proude for £40,500, the total weight of the structure being 1,500 tons. It will be between 400 feet and 500 feet high. The Isle of Man tower at Douglas is now well advanced and does not improve in appearance as the work proceeds. The Brighton tower has not yet been started, and the plans are not definitely decided. The Columbian tower at Chicago, designed by Mr. G. S. Morrison, is to be 1,120 feet high from the bottom of the foundation to the top of the flagstaff. It has a profile very similar to the Eiffel tower, but the construction is entirely different. The total weight of the structure alone is 7,000 tons; of the floors and staircases, 2,000 tons; live load, 2,000 tons, making a total of 11,000 tons.—London Industries.
