SHODDY BUILDING.

Another casualty is reported today from falling walls, this time in Indianapolis. It is appalling to consider what would happen in any large city of the United States if there should be an earthquake. American structures, almost without exception, are built with no regard to this unknown quantity, and oftentimes they tumble with much less provocation. It is true that in the history of the United States, there has occurred few of those convulsions of nature, the most notable being at Charleston; but 100 or 200 years is a trifling amount of time to base a calculation upon concerning probable earthquake shocks. The shock of 1884, general over the western half of the continent, though slight, would have been sufficient to unsettle the foundations of many of the towering structures of New York city. Americans will yet have to be taught the lesson by direful calamity such as this to put more strength into their buildings. An occasional building will fall from time to time, as it has done in the past, but when desolation and death settles over a whole region of country, as in France over a century ago, when 60,000 beings were killed in Lisbon alone, an impetus will be given to stable architecture, demanded by public sentiment, and shoddy building will be a fashion of the past.

New York speculators have been trying to take advantage of the policy of the government during the last fifteen years on the money question by forcing gold to a premium, in the meantime accumulating all they can get and driving the residue in the U. S. treasury to foreign shores. They believed that the government, in trying to give temporary relief, would sell bonds, which would work to their ends by hastening the inevitable. The Oregonian says that the success of these plans has been defeated for the present by the firm refusal of the president to allow the sale of bonds, and by the impossibility of forcing the export of gold fast enough to exhaust the sub-treasury. The conditions by which the speculators hope to prosper are not yet ripe. The effort is certain to be resumed, however, after the 4th of March. Mr. Cleveland believes that it can be defeated only by repeal of the silver law, and he will bend all his energies to that end. Mr. Cleveland is right. It is useless to rail against the gold speculators for their selfish plots against the stability of credit and the order of business. Success of their plots is only an effect, of which the mistakes of our financial policy are the cause, or at least the occasion. Given a disordered or unstable currency and there will be plotters to increase its disorder; speculators to make profit of its instability. The only remedy is to attack the root of the evil. The way to abolish gold speculators is to make and keep all money equal in exchange value with gold. This cannot long be done under a policy which constantly increases the volume of currency worth, in fact, one-third less than gold, and so current outside of our borders. That will stay at home, while gold goes abroad to pay foreign debts till we have only the cheaper money left in circulation. Then it will be the standard and gold will be merchandise for speculators.

Sir Henry Meysey Thompson, liberal unionist member of parliament for Handsworth, Staffordshire, moved in the house of commons recently that the British government should use its influence to bring about a reassembling of the international monetary conference. Mr. Gladstone replying, said that it would place the government in a ridiculous position if it should assume the initiative in reopening the conference, having nothing to recommend for discussion. Mr. Gladstone further said that England was not alone among civilized nations in her determination to adhere to her present monetary system. Seven other powers, without the slightest reference to England, had signified their intention not to change their currency. Half of the powers represented at the conference had shown that they leaned toward bimetalism, but as yet they had not given the most shadowy indication of what change they were prepared to make. In conclusion he made an elaborate exposition of the benefits of monometalism and the dangers of bimetalism. Sir Henry Meysey Thompson's motion was finally rejected by a vote of 229 to 198. The announcement of the vote was received with loud liberal cheers.

Specimen Cases.
S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him. Edwd Shepherd, Harrieburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold at Snipes & Kinersly's drug store.

WINANS
THE NEW TOWN has been platted on the old camp ground, at the Forks and Falls of Hood river, with large slightly lots, broad streets and alleys, good soil, pure cold water and shade in profusion, perfect drainage, delightful mountain climate, the central attraction as a mountain summer resort and for all Oregon, being the nearest town to Mt. Hood. It is also unparalleled as a manufacturing center, being the natural center for 150 square miles of the best cedar and fir timber, possessing millions of horse power in its dashing streams and waterfalls, easily harnessed. Where cheap motive power exists, there the manufacturing will center, surrounded by soil and climate that cannot be excelled anywhere for fruit and agriculture, and with transportation already assured you will find this the place to make a perfect home or a paying investment.
