A Courtship by Letter OOD SAW Mrs. Mary M. Stevens, of Lincoln, was married the first of the week at Grand Island to Nelson Wetson, of the fall and winter split and pile wood ossible rates. Cheyenne. The marriage was the outcome of a strange correspondence, A friend of Mrs. Stevens is in the employ of Nelson in Cheyenne, and suggested to him one evening that he knew of a woman who would make him an excel-lent wife. Nelson agreed, if the fair creature should prove acceptable and could be won, to marry her. He imme-diately wrote to Mrs. Stevens, setting forth that he was the owner of a large and paying ranch, was well off in the world and wanted some one to share his lot and help eat his potatoes. The lady was not averse to embarking in the matrimonial sca for a second time, and agreed that if everything was as represented and the man was of a good moral character she would accept.

She was fully satisfied on these points and they immediately considered themselves engaged. Business interests pre-vented Nelson leaving home long enough to come to Lincoln and he did not wish to be so ungallant as to compel his betrothed to go to him, so they compro mised and agreed to meet at Grand Is-land. Mrs. Stevens left for Grand Island, where the couple met for the first time. Both considered that they had secured a bargain and were made one at once. A letter was received in this city from the happy bride, in which she says that he is just glorious and too sweet for anything .- Cor. Omaha World-Herald.
