THE HAWAIIAN FLAG.

Americans are impulsive; they think hastily. When the news reached The Dalles yesterday that "Old Glory" had been taken down at Honolulu there was a general feeling of disappointment and chagrin, and this may be taken as the sentiment of the whole country. However, with the past before us, bearing in mind the brilliant successes of former statesmen in all telling events, there need be no cause for alarm. There is nothing disgraceful in the fact that diplomacy ordered down the flag; that is the only way it could come down. If it was shot down by enemies, who were later successful in planting their own in lieu thereof, then we might indeed bewail the event. But when the Hawaiian flag goes up, with which nation we are especially friendly, and after all is said, has really the right to hoist her own flag whenever and wherever she sees fit on her own domain; when Commissioner Blount sits in his easy chair on the portico of his hotel in amused and mysterious silence; and when no thunder peals are heard from Washington in disapproval; then we may be sure that the event is simply in line with a previously agreed course of conduct.

It may be that at this time the American flag is flying all over Hawaii, signifying much more than the first right to friendship, and now heralding possession.

This or many other things might happen within the seven or eight days it takes to get news from the "hotel of the Pacific." Britain may view the fact of the coming down of the flag as a chance to treat with Hawaii for annexation to her own empire, since Hawaii is in a direct line from British America to Australia and would make for her a valuable hostelry; but before she could move, annexation to America may have already been accomplished.

If this has happened, it is fitting that in the last few hours of existence of an old nation, their own ancient flag, even if it is "hybrid," should have no rival in its own soil. It should be borne in mind that America is not coercing Hawaii by force of arms, and the Stars and Stripes have no right on Hawaii unless by a declaration of war.

The Daily Columbian is the title of the morning newspaper to be issued on the world's fair grounds. It is the only official bulletin of the Columbian exposition. It will be an eight-page composite paper, unlike anything ever seen before, five pages consisting of the first page of the Tribune, Times, Inter Ocean, Herald, and News-Record, all of Chicago; the other three pages containing official orders, programmes, prices of transportation, list of officers, and matter of interest to exhibitors and visitors furnished by the Department of Publicity and Promotion, under the supervision of Maj. Handy, who will virtually be the editor. W. C. Gates, lately of the Review of Reviews, New York, will be the manager. The first number of the Daily Columbian will appear on May 1st. The printing of the paper will be done in Machinery Hall on one of the most modern and interesting of printing machines. The price of the new paper will be five cents for a single copy, or, by mail, $1 a month, with postage added when sent to a foreign country.

In the libel suit brought against an Astoria newspaper Judge McBride charged the jury that "whenever a newspaper finds a case of flagrant wrong-doing or evil, it is its duty, as well as its privilege, to expose it, and give that expose the widest circulation." This is a duty every honest newspaper owes the public. It is right that the public prints should apprise their readers of fraud and malicious schemers.

A typewriter trust has been formed. It is perhaps needless to say that it was organized to control the machines and not the dear girls who operate them. Trusts are powerful, but not even trusts can accomplish impossibilities.

A REAL KING IN AMERICA.

He is a Half-Breed Comanche Indian and His Rule is Absolute.

"There is a real king out in the southwestern part of Indian territory," said a citizen of St. Louis to a Washington Star reporter recently, "and in a recent trip down through the Comanche and Kiowa countries I met Quanna Parker, head chief of the Comanches. The Comanches are still 'blanket Indians,' that is, they are not civilized and educated like the Choctaws and they live in tepees. But they are among the sharpest and brightest of Indians. Every boy remembers in dime novels that Comanches were the favorite enemies of the brave trappers and hardy pioneers. They were fighters and are the most expert horsemen in the world. But they fight no longer, are rapidly becoming civilized, and for their progress and docility Quanna Parker is to be thanked.

"Parker is a half-breed, the son of a chief whose wife was a white captive girl. When but a youth Parker, by his daring and bravery and successful exploits against other tribes and the whites in the Indian wars, rose above the older chiefs and became the leader. Now that the wars are forever over his same great will power and strong personality impress themselves as strongly upon his tribe, but in the direction of advancement and civilization. He is virtually a king. His word is law; his will supreme. He says he will civilize his tribe, and he will do it. As one result of his efforts many of his Indians live in frame houses. He compelled them to save one-half of their money received from the sale of their cattle. With sixty Indians' wagons he went down into Texas, bought lumber, then came on to Washington and persuaded Indian Commissioner Morgan to build the houses. He lives in a fine nine-roomed frame house, handsomely furnished in modern style, Brussels carpets, fine upholstered furniture, mural adornments, and decorated nicely. His office, with its desk and fittings, occupies one room, and it is here he transacts his business. He wears a white shirt and trousers with leggings, braided hair, and colors his face when among his people, but when traveling dresses expensively in fashionably made clothes and sports a big diamond pin. He has horses without number, two coaches, four buggies and other vehicles. He has six wives to brighten his household, and I never heard of any hair pulling. There is a method in his polygamous madness. Each wife is the daughter of a chief of the six principal divisions or squads of the tribe. So he is solid with the whole lot on this score.

PUZZLED MONKEYS.

A Caterpillar Invades Their Quarters with Tragic Results.

One of the cages in the menagerie was inhabited by an ateles, or prehensile-tailed monkey from Central America, and a dog-faced monkey from western Africa. Each held the other in the supreme contempt. The African mused silently over his own strength and looked scornfully at the spider-like arms of his cousin in captivity, while the American didn't think much of a monkey who had such a short stumpy tail as his companion.

One day a caterpillar, a long brown hairy one, crept into the cage. Where it had come from no one knew, but there it was treading its quiet way across the cage. The ateles spied it, and stopping in his gymnastic exercises dropped to the ground to investigate the newcomer. For a short time he looked quizzically and wonderingly at the woolly object, which went quietly along. Then the right hand was thrust out timidly, and as the fingers touched the caterpillar it curled up into a hairy ball. The monkey jumped back, blinked his eyes as if to be certain of what was what, gibbered and then with the aid of his tail drew himself up to one of the horizontal bars and looked down wonderingly. The dog-faced monkey looked on from above with apparent scornful unconcern. The little act was rehearsed again and again, whenever the caterpillar uncoiled itself and started for some untold goal. At last a happy thought struck the ateles. There was a small stick in the cage, and grasping this with both hands the valiant monkey, with many a grewsome look upon his face, started in to "do up" the uncanny intruder. He jabbed down at the unoffending visitor several times with a sadly inaccurate aim, hopping back after each attempt and making such comical faces that the onlookers were fairly convulsed with laughter.

The dog-faced monkey alone was still, silent and circumspect. At last, after many attempts, the stick came down flat on the caterpillar, crushing out its life. The ateles bent forward to seize the defunct crawler, and was just about to make a meal of its poor victim when there dropped from the upper perch, on the spider-legged simian, the dog-faced monkey, who quickly demolished the remains of the caterpillar, while the ateles gave vent to his disappointment in plaintive cries, ugly grimaces and acrobatic performances which "brought down the house," the spectators of this small tragedy.—N. Y. Tribune.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J. Knutson & Co., Kensington, Minn. 50 cent bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton.

Persons who are subject to attacks of bilious colic can almost invariably tell, by their feelings, when to expect an attack. If Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is taken as soon as these symptoms appear, they can ward off the disease. Such persons should always keep the Remedy at hand, ready for immediate use when needed. Two or three doses of it at the right time will save them much suffering. For sale by Blakeley and Houghton, druggists.

Two Americans who were dining at tables in front of a cafe in Paris, near the Seine, noticed high up on the front wall of a building a red mark, and underneath it this inscription: "Inundation of 1875. High-water mark. 'Come! come!' said one of the Americans to the restaurant keeper; 'you don't expect us to believe that the river ever rose as high as that?' 'Oh, no,' said the proprietor, blandly; 'it only came up to here.' He made a sort of scratch with his thumb nail down near the ground. 'But, you see, when the mark was down there the children rubbed it out so continually that we had to put it up there out of their reach.'

USED THEM IN HIS BLOW-GUN.
Doctor—"Well, my fine little fellow, you have got quite well again. I was sure the pills I left for you would cure you. How did you take them, in water or in cake?"
Boy—"Oh, I used them in my blow-gun."

The little fellow put the nasty, great, gripping, old-fashioned pills to a good use. At most, all his internal economy needed was a dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, easy to take, and are gently aperient, or actively cathartic, according to size of dose. As a laxative, only one tiny Pellet is required.

The "Pellets" cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

The "Pellets" are purely vegetable, and operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the cheapest pill, sold by druggists, because they are guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or their price (25 cents a vial) is refunded. Can you ask more?
