THURSDAY, - - - MAY 4, 1893

A New York daily paper, taking up the idea conveyed in Flammarion's exciting novel, "Omega: The Last Days of the World," has interviewed a number of the leading men in all professions as to what they would do if science were to predict tomorrow that the end of the world would arrive within the next thirty days. The answers are various and curious, and heighten the interest which is felt in the second part of Flammarion's great novel, which appears in the May Cosmopolitan. It is a question which everyone will find interesting to ask of himself: What would you do if within six weeks the end of the world were certain? Probably no novel which has ever appeared in an American magazine has been more elaborately illustrated by more distinguished artists. Laurens, Sannier, Vogel, Meaulle, Rochegrosse, Geradin and Chovin all contribute to the explanation of the text.

A clever story of another kind is that of the new English novelist, Gilbert Parker, in the same number. "American Society in Paris" is an article of another kind, but one which will interest all who have had occasion to make even a short residence in the French capital. The Cosmopolitan scores a success in producing in its May number, also simultaneously with the daily papers, an elaborate description of Professor Gray's marvellous invention, the telautograph, which reproduces the handwriting, or the work of the artist, simultaneously, thousands of miles distant from the place where the writer or artist is sitting. Mr. Howells' purpose in "The Traveller from Altruria" is, month by month, becoming more evident, and is now receiving wide attention at the hands of the critics all over the world.

Home rule in England is as persistent a question as the tariff is in the United States. Gladstone is the venerable leader for the Irish cause and Salisbury is opposed. Gladstone's usefulness is nearing to an end on account of his great age, but like Richelieu, the opposition may well "beware of the falling ruins." That the grand old man does not think with his old-time clearness is believed to be true because in furnishing Ireland with home rule, he provides in his new bill that Irishmen shall have much to say with the management of England herself. If that clause had been omitted the advocates of home rule would have been strengthened, whereas now they stand but a poor chance of accomplishing their object.

The greed of New York bankers is coming home to them through an increasing popular sentiment against their unpatriotic action in forcing the government into an embarrassing position. The government has made the existence of national banks possible and while they have now grown to be a necessity they should none the less show a disposition to reciprocate. The bankers of The Dalles, while they can contribute but a mite to the possible large demands for gold, state that they would be willing to do all they can if so requested by Secretary Carlisle.

Recent advices from England, received by the friends of Miss Frances Willard in Evanston, state that Miss Willard has entirely broken down in health. She has been prohibited by physicians from returning to America until fall, and it seems they are much concerned for her life even under the best of care. She will spend part of the summer in Switzerland, and return to America in the fall if able.

Herr Krupp the other day received a communication informing him that his vast establishments were to be burned down. He called his thousands of workmen together, read them the letter and said: "If any of you has made this threat let him execute it, but I warn you that I will not rebuild. I am now rich enough to live without working."

S. B. MED. MFG. CO.,
Dufur, Oregon.
Gentlemen:—
On arriving home last week, I found all well and anxiously awaiting. Our little girl, eight and one-half years old, who had wasted away to 38 pounds, is now well, strong and vigorous, and well fleshed up. S. B. Cough Cure has done its work well. Both of the children like it. Your S. B. Cough Cure has cured and kept away all hoarseness from me. So give it to every one, with greetings for all. Wishing you prosperity, we are Yours,
