"Don't lay a hand on me, or you'll drop dead."
 Captain Bennett heard the words and opened the door, standing in the entrance with a bundle of War Crys in her arms.
 "You wronged me and you know it," Hoskins shouted at her.
 As he spoke, he fired. The ball missed. He shot again. The War Crys fluttered loosely to the floor, and Captain Bennett fell. When Hoskins fell forward his life-blood dyed the papers, and formed a thick, red pool, extending on each side of the body.
 The women did not even gasp. Her eyelids moved slightly, and she breathed her last.
 Attracted by the sound of the shots, a morbid, curious crowd collected at the foot of the stairway, and before a policeman arrived to keep them back, many persons gathered about the bodies. The sickening sight seemed to have a strange fascination for many of them. Coroner Newman had difficulty forcing his way to the place where the tragedy occurred.
 The woman was removed to the morgue first, and orders were given to have the body embalmed for transportation to San Francisco. Hoskins will be buried at the expense of Spokane county, probably, as no one has shown any interest in giving him a private burial.

SING SING, N. Y., May 7.—Carlyle Harris has said farewell to his parents and friends and all dear to him on earth, and now awaits the messenger of death. The last act in the strange drama of his life approaches, and while he shows a nervous apprehension and a full appreciation of the terrible thing that is to come to him on the morrow, no signs of breaking down are visible. He adheres to his oft-repeated declaration of innocence, and he passed the best part of his last day on earth not in communication with his spiritual advisers preparing for the great hereafter, but with pen and ink and paper, reviewing the past and seeking to place himself right with the world he leaves. He was a trifle more nervous than usual today, the situation having its effect upon him, and the man who allowed no sign of emotion to escape him during the scenes of the past months is at least showing that he is human. The prison physician saw Harris twice today, and said that while he was a little more nervous than usual, he could discover no signs of a breaking down. Mrs. Harris remained at her boarding-house today and did not go to the prison.

She took her last farewell of her boy yesterday afternoon. The scene was one of the saddest which has ever been witnessed within the grim walls, where all is sadness. The younger brother, Allan, also said good-bye yesterday. This afternoon Charles D. Harris, the father, accompanied by young Allan, went to the prison, and father and son met for the first time in years. Mr. and Mrs. Harris have lived apart for some time. Afterward the father took the train back to his home in Syracuse, leaving Mrs. Harris and Allan to wait here until all is over and they can carry away all that is mortal of their beloved. The last farewell to relatives having been said, Carlyle Harris devoted his time to writing a review of the chief events of his life and of what has been done by the courts, judges and governor in his case. All preparations have been made for tomorrow. The electrocution will take place about noon. State Electrician Davis has tested the dynamo and apparatus and found everything in order. The apparatus is the same which was used in the last two electrocutions here.

LOVED HER TOO WELL.
D. W. Hoskins Murders Ida Bennett and Suielides.
 SPOKANE, Wash., May 6.—D. W. Hoskins, a demented man, driven mad by constant brooding over his unrequited affection for Captain Ida Bennett of the Salvation army, shot and killed her yesterday afternoon at 2:45 at the barracks and then turned the weapon upon himself with fatal effect. His last words, pronounced after he shot her and before he took his own life, were: "I killed her because I loved her, and I am as well off dead myself."
 A deafening report followed and Hoskins fell forward on his face. Four members of the Salvation army saw the deed, but were powerless to prevent it. The weapon was a 44-caliber revolver loaded with Winchester rifle cartridges. The first shot penetrated the woman's heart, entering below her left arm as she stood with her left side turned toward him.
 The suicidal bullet did its work with awful certainty. The muzzle of the weapon touched the right temple as it was fired, and the leaden ball made its exit just above the left ear. The concussion split the skull as if with an axe. Blood and brains were scattered over a space of 10 feet square, and as the man lay in his own blood, the greater part of his mangled brain oozed out on to the floor.
 When Hoskins entered the barracks he was an avowed would-be murderer and suicide, for he had sent the forenoon writing letters expressive of his intentions. He held the revolver concealed under his coat-tails as he went up the steps. Lieutenant Augusta Wechter, Berna Eirstlans and J. C. Finstad were standing in the front of the audience room. Captain Bennett had entered the room at the right of the platform to get several copies of the War Cry. Hoskins walked straight for the platform. Finstad attempted to detain him, but he said, fiercely:

THE ARMY BILL LOST
Offer to Reduce the Peace Effective Does Not Gain a Vote.
REICHSTAG AT ONCE DISSOLVED
Socialist Democrats Ready for a Campaign, and Expect to Increase Their Representation.

BERLIN, May 6.—The army bill was rejected today in the reichstag by a vote of 210 against the bill to 162 in favor of it. The rescript signed by the kaiser dissolving the reichstag was immediately promulgated, and the reichstag is now dissolved. The result of the vote on the army bill caused no surprise to the government. Caprivi attempted yesterday evening to rally the wavering members to a support of the measure by offering to reduce the peace effective even below the number proposed in the amendment offered by Von Huene. The offer, however, did not gain a single vote. The last attempts at compromise having failed, Caprivi refusing to sanction the proposition to make two years' active service permanent, the kaiser became impatient of further delay, and proposed for a decision by the reichstag today. Hence a vote was taken at once, instead of being postponed until Monday. The failure of the army bill makes it necessary for the kaiser to defer for the present his projected reforms of the higher military commands and of the posts in the war office. Chancellor Caprivi has gone to Potsdam to offer his resignation to the kaiser.

Hurriedly convened meetings are being held in Berlin and other populous centers tonight. The promptness with which the reichstag was dissolved immediately after the defeat of the government was announced has taken everybody by surprise. Social democratic leaders are alone ready for an electoral campaign. Bebel, Singer and Liebnicht will leave Berlin tomorrow and begin at once to stump the country in behalf of the socialist candidates. In every district in which the socialists have a fighting chance candidates will be nominated, and the party expects with reason to have an increased representation in the next reichstag. The emperor will not allow the dissolution of the reichstag to interfere with the programme of his coming tour.

THOMAS F. BAYARD.
The Honorable Career of Our New Ambassador to England.
 Thomas Francis Bayard, the new ambassador to the court of St. James, was born in Wilmington, Del., in 1838. He was fitted for a mercantile life and placed in a business house in New York city. He returned to Wilmington in 1848, studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1851. He was appointed United States district attorney for Delaware, but resigned the following year. In 1855 he removed to Philadelphia, where he became the partner of William Shippen. He returned to Wilmington and succeeded his father to the United States senate in 1868. He was reelected in 1875 and again in 1881. Mr. Cleveland appointed him secretary of state in 1885. On the day on which he was elected to the senate for a full term his father was also reelected a senator from Delaware to serve for the unexpired part of his original term. This is the only case of a father and son being voted for by the same legislature to fill the senatorial office. In the senate he served on the committees on finance, judiciary, private land claims, library and revision of laws. In 1881 he was elected president pro tempore of the senate. He was a candidate for president in 1880 and 1884. Including his great-grandfather, Gov. Bassett, he is the fifth member of his family who have occupied seats in the United States senate.
