Locations for State Institutions.

THE DALLES, Or., May 11, 1893. EDITOR CHRONICLE:

It surely requires no lawyer to see that the injunction suit lately initiated before Judge Burnett of Albany, against the trustees of the Oregon Soldiers' Home has not the shadow of a foundation to rest on. The state constitution nowhere provides that all or any of the public institutions of the state shall be located at the seat of government. The only reference in the constitution to the location of the state institutions is contained in a provision in section 3 of article 14 to the effect that it all the state institutions should be located at the place chosen for the seat of government then, in that case, the place first chosen should remain the seat of government for a period of 20 years from its selection. Here is the section in question:

"The seat of government, when established as provided in section one, shall not be removed for the term of 20 years from the time of such establishment, nor in any manner than as provided in the first section of this article; Provided, that all the public institutions of the state, hereafter provided for by the legislative assembly, shall be located at the seat of government."

That is to say, if all the public institutions shall be located at the capital in that case the seat of government shall remain in the place first chosen for 20 years, but if any of the public institutions should be located away from the seat of government the people could, if they so willed, remove the seat of government to another place without waiting for the 20 years to expire. This is, by every rule of grammar, the plain meaning of the words, however legal subtlety may understand them. The word "provided" implies a condition, and qualifies the provisions that percede it. "Provided" all the state institutions shall be located at the seat of government, twenty years must transpire before the capitol can be removed to another place. As a matter of fact all the state institutions have not been located at Salem, Corvallis having the agricultural college and Eugene the state university. Is it possible that these institutions have been located there in defiance of the constitution and that the Salemites or whoever they may be who are at the bottom of the pending injunction suit have only now made the discovery? Is it conceivable that his excellency, Gov. Pennoyer, whose powers for detecting things unconstitutional are well known, should have allowed the bills for the soldiers' home and branch asylum to have become laws without giving the alarm before of

Mr. Leonard Courtney, who is one of the convinced bi-metallists, writes to the Nineteenth Century on this interminable subject. He has a suggestion of his own which he thinks both good and practical: "Assuming that the existing market value of silver showed a ratio between it and gold of something between 23 and 24 to one, he would provide that the mitn receive silver bullion and grant certificates therefor which should be legal tender at the ratio of 25 to one. Five years ago I joined with my friends in deprecating any attempt to establish an international agreement for the free coinage of both gold and silver as standard money. I have advanced, with further reflection, to the belief that such an agreement is to be desired, and that it could be accomplished with the minimum of change and with great advantage to the empire and the world on the conditions I have suggested."

unconstitutionality? We think not.

A writer in the Atlantic gives this as the origin of the slang word "socdollager," which was current some time ago. "Socdollager" was the uneducated man's transposition of "doxologer," which was the familiar New England rendering of "doxology." This was the Puritan term for the verse of ascription used at the conclusion of every hymn, like the "Gloria," at the end of a chanted psalm. On doctrinal grounds it was proper for the whole congregation to join in the singing, so that it became a triumphant winding up of the whole act of worship. Thus it happened that "socdollager" became the term for any-thing which left nothing else to follow; a decisive overwhelming finish, to which no reply was possible.

MINANS

The New Town has been platted on the old camp ground, at the Forks and Falls of Hood river, with large sightly lots, broad streets and alleys, good soil, pure cold water and shade in profusion, perfect drainage, delightful mountain climate, the central attraction as a mountain summer resort and for all Oregon, being the nearest town to Mt. Hood. It is also unparalled as a manufacturing center, being the natural center for 150 square miles of the best cedar and ir timber, possessing millions of horse power in its dashing streams and water-fails, easily harnessed. Where cheap motive power exists, there the manufactories will center, surrounded by soil and climate that cannot be excelled anywhere for fruit and agriculture, and with transportation already assured you will find this the place to make a perfect home or a paying investment
