WOOL KEEPS DOWN.

The wool situation is very unsatisfactory and quite discouraging. There are a few buyers at the warehouses, but as a tendency of the markets abroad, are weak in tone. They are shy and advise consignment, which means to get it away from first hands for the purpose of controlling. Experiences of the past by producers have been unsatisfactory, consequently they prefer to hold for futures themselves.

The following from the Boston Advertiser of the 26th of May will be of interest to our readers:

The past week has shown a very dull market, and while sales foot up larger than during the past few weeks, it is entirely due to the low prices that have been accepted. Some large lines of wool have been cleaned up, but it has not been because manufacturers were hungry for supplies. The latter as a rule are taking only what they need, but in the cases noted the seller accepted bids that the buyer considered safe and the latter got the wool. Of these sales noted, the one of 100,000 pounds Michigan delaine, which was cleaned up at 25 1/2c, was the greatest surprise to the trade. The balance of the lot sold two months ago at 32c to the same buyer, who cleaned up the last of it this week. The trade feel that the price obtained was very low, but the wool was to be sold, and the holder was doubtful of getting as good price bid if the wool was held until new fleeces began to come in with any freedom.

Reports from the west note conditions very unsatisfactory there. Some local buyers bought wools early at prices that stand them a sharp loss on the present market, and they are consequently trying hard to hold values up.

Ohio fine wools are very dull, and while but few are held here these have to be sold at a low price to find a buyer. One lot of XX and delaine was cleaned up at 27 1/2c, while other lots of XX on the market are offered at 28c. Any lots to command above 28c would have to be very fancy, and to find a special buyer who wanted it. For X Ohio the market is nominal at 26c, with X Michigan at 25c, but any free offerings would have to be at concessions. Combing fleeces are very dull, with No. 1s scarce and nominal. No. 1 clothing fleeces are also scarce and nominal in price. Unwashed fine fleeces are slow of sales with fat sheep's wool dull and nominal, the latter attracting no attention this season. For 1/2 and 3/4 blood wools, the market is very dull, with prices quoted 1c lower. The feeling at present is that in the fine wool sections of Ohio, about 20c will be all that buyers can pay, but the growers at present are not down to that figure. Some eastern dealers claim that 18 to 19c is all that they will risk, and the most unfavorable feature is that every day their views appear to grow more depressed instead of better. A large operator who sent his limit to buy out the first of the week, notified his agent, yesterday, to cut prices 2c, as he did not care to run the risk of loading up at the figures he had named previously.

The trade have got money as a rule, and do not propose to run great risks of losing it, when the prospects of success are so unfavorable. They will take a limited amount of wool at a price, but it will have to be well down to the "free wool" basis, as the chances appear great that much of it will have to be held over till the tariff change is made. The wool manufacturer is not going to make any more goods than he has a sure market for until the tariff change has been effected, and consequently will not require the amount of raw material of former years. The wool held over will have to go at the "free wool" basis, and no one desires the pleasure of carrying it, except at a price that will make him safe.

Pulled wools are dull and gradually working down.

Territory wools continue dull, with the market gradually working down as far as prices are concerned, while recent sales have been on the basis of 53 to 55c for fine strong staple warp wools. The market is now undoubtedly several cents below that price. There is no quotable price for the wools, and dealers are trying to get all that they can, while the courage of some sellers is more than others. The market is nominally about 52 to 53c scoured for fine, and about 50 to 51c for fine medium, but while some buyers might pay more than this if they found a lot of wool that they wanted, some sellers might make concessions from this price if they could get a better bid. No one feels disposed to hold wool where they can sell it, as they feel that a low price this week may mean a good sale a few days hence from the way the market is working. But few new Texas wools are coming forward, while prices for them rule about the same as for territory. California wools are dull and nominal. The stock of old Montana wools has been cleaned up, and with no new wools the price for such is nominal.

Australian wools are very quiet, as at the prices domestic wools are quoted, a buyer cannot pay the duty on the former and use them to advantage, without he is making special goods that require that kind of wool in the finish. The price is firm, from the fact that the same conditions that operate against domestic wools on account of the expected tariff change, is favorable to the foreign supplies. The wool is held in bond until used, and should wool be made free of duty, it would come in at no duty the same as new importations. These wools are now selling here lower than in London, and no one is disposed to press sales. Montevideo and Cape wools are dull, with almost nothing doing. Carpet wools are quiet, but the market holds firm. The bulk of the recent arrivals have been on manufacturers account, and will be in bond until wanted.

We quote the selling prices of the market for leading descriptions as follows:

California wool—Spr Northern, 18@21c; middle co spr, 15@17c; Southern defective, 11@14c; free North fall, 15@18c; South do, 11@14c; defective, 9@11c.
