FALSE REPORTS.

Rev. Whisler, who claims the Ohio Wesleyan university as his alma mater, has been shocked at the late sensational reports concerning the hazing of girl students, and leaves the following statement from the faculty, as published in the Christian Advocate, which contradicts the Associated Press reports:

The report that the young ladies have engaged in hazing is not true. There has never been a single case of hazing among the girls of the college. One evening some girls foolishly marked themselves and three or four of their schoolmates with burnt cork and chalk. One of the girls had a two per cent solution of nitrate of silver, which had been procured at a drug store. She tested it on her own arm and found that it left a slight stain, but was perfectly harmless. Four of the girls were slightly marked in the palms of the hands and on their wrists with this solution. This, however, was not done against the will of anyone. Two of the girls washed off the solution that night, and it did not leave the slightest mark. The other two left the solution on over night, and were unable to wash it off the next morning before breakfast. On their way to the college grounds to recite they stopped at a drug store and asked the druggist to remove the nitrate, which he did without any pain and without leaving any mark. No young woman at this college has ever received any bodily injury from another student; nor has any young woman in connection with this matter been guilty of conduct toward another student which the parents of either party would disapprove.

The action of these students has inflicted disgrace upon the university, upon themselves, and been a cause of great mortification to their relatives. They are deserving of little sympathy. We have a perennial sympathy with youthful energy, activity and high spirits. Nor do we oppose practical jokes if they regard the rights of property, person, and reputation, and do not infract decency. Ingenious and ingenious minds will have no trouble in inventing practical jokes within the limits of morality and refinement.

The city council at their last meeting inaugurated a system of sanitation that, if perhaps heroic, is one of the wisest measures ever attempted by that body of men. The stench of outhouses in the summer time has been a nuisance for many years, and one of the most prolific causes of disease. Typhoid fever, diphtheria, two of the severest diseases known to mankind, are nearly always traceable to polluted air and water, caused by carelessness on the part of citizens. Scarlet fever, small pox and allied contagious diseases are better and more thoroughly perpetuated when garbage and decaying vegetation are thrown anywhere, and when open water closets are allowed to exist in thickly populated portions of the town. Instances are plentiful where otherwise admirable citizens have been indifferent to laws they knew existed and occasional specific orders, asking them to connect their privies with the sewers, which would have been but a trifling expense. Such people, and all others who are now directly to be asked to remedy these defects will do so uncomplainingly, since they are aware, as well as others, that their course has not been one for the best interests of the general welfare.

A Frenchman states that there are 51,000 breweries in the world. Germany easily leads with 26,240, which produce 4,750 million litres of beer yearly, a litre being equal to about 1 1/4 pints. England comes next with 12,874 breweries and an output of 2,600 million litres; then the United States with 2,300 breweries and 3,500 million litres; Austria with 1,942 breweries and 1,300 million litres; Belgium, with 1,290 breweries and 1,000 million litres, and France with 1,044 breweries and 800 million litres. In Bavaria the annual allowance of beer of the population is 221 litres; in Berlin, 191; in Belgium, 169; in England, 143; in Switzerland, 31; in Denmark, 93; in the United States, 31; in Sweden, 11, and in Russia, 5. These are not offered as temperance statistics, because beer is not the principal drink in all countries. The Russians are not a beer drinking people, nor are they an especially temperate nation.

BEEES IN HER BEDROOM.

A Staten Island Girl Who Finds the Insects Quiet Companions.

There is a girl in Staten Island who has kept a hive of bees in her bedroom during the winter. She said recently, according to the New York Sun, that they were the most unobjectionable of companions. They are quiet, orderly and attend strictly to their own affairs. When the warm weather comes they will be sent out doors, where there are beds of mignonette and other sweet scented flowers, which the bees fully understand are planted for their special use. This hive of bees is the nucleus of her contemplated bee farm. Last summer they supplied her weekly with thirty-six pounds of honey. For each pound of honey she received thirty cents. The profits of bee-keeping are great, the cost small. The labor of honey-raising has been materially lessened for the bees by modern improvements, and they seem proportionately grateful. The bees no longer make their own cells, which are produced by machinery out of wax. These artificial cells are placed in the hive and the bees seem to be glad to get rid of the labor of making them. Immediately they get to honey making. This business they conduct alone. When the cells are full the hive must be watched from without, lest the bees begin sealing them up, which they do in order to lay up their winter's food. To guard against this, additional cells are put on top of the hive, called supers. In these the bees deposit their extra store, and this is reserved for their winter outfit. When the bees begin to seal the cells the box is removed, a small machine is put inside which is set vibrating, and this empties the cells of their honey, which is drawn off, and the cells, having been drained, are put back to be refilled. This young woman says that her bees know her, and are as tame to her hand as doves. The occupation of honey making has proved pleasurable and profitable.

A BARONY FOR SALE CHEAP.

One of the Most Famous of Carolina Plantations Put on the Market.

In old St. Stephen's, famous in song and story, a parish of Berkeley county, on the banks of the tawny Santee, some fifty miles in a straight line from the shores of the Atlantic, is a great landed estate whose broad acres, level river bottom and rolling highland, cultivated fields, tangled swamp, stately pine grove, groups of live oak, with here and there a bit of virgin forest, form a domain fit for a prince. On it, according to the Charleston News and Courier, have lived and died a long succession of Carolina planters, all princes in their day, to whom, while slavery lasted, snowy fields of cotton and waving crops of Indian corn and smaller grain furnished a princely revenue. And the cattle, if not of a thousand hills, of a thousand canebreaks, was theirs, and droves of wild hogs, that thrive in the thickets of the swamps, and blooded horses were their pride.

All that is gone by now. The lordly life of the planter has passed away forever; slavery has been abolished and the struggle with demoralized freedmen, would fain give up the fight, and offers his patrimony for sale for a song, for barely enough to support him comfortably for the decade of life that may yet remain to him. There are six thousand acres in that estate, which is offered to any taker at very little over two dollars an acre. Of that six thousand acres there is arable land capable of producing a bale of cotton to the acre, twenty to thirty bushels of corn, over seventy bushels of oats, to say nothing of the possibilities of fruit and vegetables and of horse, cattle and hog raising.

Why don't foreign counts marry poor American girls? They have no principle, hence no interest, and with neither a poor girl can not bank a count.—N. Y. Independent.

While Mr. T. J. Richey of Altona, Mo., was traveling in Kansas he was taken violently ill with cholera morbus. He called at a drug store to get some medicine and the druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy so highly he concluded to try it. The result was immediate relief, and a few doses cured him completely. It is made for bowel complaint and nothing else. It never fails. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists, 1m

There is nothing I have ever used for muscular rheumatism that gives me as much relief as Chamberlain's Pain Balm does. I have been using it for about two years—four bottles in all—as occasion required, and always keep a bottle of it in my home. I believe I know a good thing when I get hold of it, and Pain Balm is the best liniment I have ever met with. W. B. Denny, dairyman, New Lexington, Ohio. 50 cent bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton, 1m Shiloh's cure, the Great Cough and Croup Cure, is for sale by Snipes & Kinersly. Pocket size contains twenty-five doses, only 25c. Children love it. Sold by Snipes & Kinersly.

THE NEW TOWN has been platted on the old camp ground, at the Forks and Falls of Hood river, with large, slightly lots, broad streets and alleys, good soil and pure water, with shade in profusion, perfect drainage, delightful mountain climate, the central attraction as a mountain summer resort for all Oregon, being the nearest town to Mt. Hood. It is unparalleled as a manufacturing center, being the natural center for 150 square miles of the best cedar and fir timber, possessing millions of horse-power in its dashing streams and waterfalls, easily harnessed. Where cheap motive power exists, there the manufacturing will center, surrounded by soil and climate that cannot be excelled anywhere for fruit and agriculture, and with transportation already assured you will find this the place to make a perfect home or a paying investment.
