At this meeting the proposition will be discussed of forming a part of the Floral Branch of the Oregon Horticulture Society, to meet in Portland soon.

A Fearful Nuisance.

It is bad enough to have cows wandering at will through the streets and alleys, without the added torture of the bells which they invariably wear, making night hideous and rest impossible. There is a pound erected for these vagrant animals, as well as officers employed to run them in, and this should be done. And they are not only troublesome, but dangerous. The other night a number of them were congregated in an alley, near Mr. Egan's, where there are sick people, and the noise made by the bells so wore upon the sick ones, that a boy was sent out to drive them away. In the effort to do so he was chased by one of them and some of his clothes torn off his back while trying to escape. Loose cows should be impounded, and a specialty made of those wearing bells.

The Concert Tonight.

The concert tonight should be well patronized by all true lovers of music. The following is the corrected program:

Rose Whist.

Roses have been aptly termed the "queen of flowers." Such was the verdict of every lady who entered the bower of roses into which the parlors of Mrs. W. Lord were transformed yesterday afternoon. In every available space were placed the choicest of roses, the balustrade being twined with them from top to bottom, and each lady was presented with one as she entered, by which she was to find her partner, whose rose was of the same variety and color. After the "gentlemen" had secured their partners, whist was the queen's favorite subject until the games were played, when hearts, diamonds, spades and even clubs, gave place to a more substantial trump, and such a lunch certainly proved to be the "winning card." After ten games more had been played, Mrs. Myers was presented with a very pretty fancy basket filled with roses as the head prize. But every lady was fortunate in receiving a prize, for the hostess, not content with the more than admirable manner in which she had entertained her guests, bade them carry away all of the roses they wished. The following ladies were fortunate enough to be present: Mrs. W. Lord, Miss Etta Lord of Chillicothe, Ohio, Mesdames F. Houghton, J. W. French, N. B. Sinnott, E. Schutz, J. Marden, S. L. Brooks, W. S. Myers, M. French, H. Glenn, W. Hobson, W. E. Rinehart, A. Thompson, L. E. Crowe, W. H. Wilson, H. S. Wilson, J. Fish, J. T. Peters, L. D. Ainsworth, J. C. Hostetler, G. C. Blakeley, A. S. Bennett, W. L. Bradshaw, J. B. Crossen, Misses Virginia Marden and Rose Michell.

VALUABLE MARBLE.

A Ledge of the Belgium Black Variety Discovered Near La Center.

Telegram.

M. D. Conway, who owns 49 acres of land near La Center, Wash., which is near the Columbia river between The Dalles and Portland, has discovered a ledge of Belgium black marble on his land, which will probably net him a fortune. Mr. Conway accidentally discovered the ledge while making fence posts about three weeks ago. In driving a nail he struck a block of marble with his hammer and chipped off a piece of it. Thinking it was coal, he carried it home and showed it to some visitors, who pronounced it an unknown specimen of marble. He was referred to Rev. R. D. Grant of this city, who is an expert geologist, for further information, and coming to Portland he showed the specimen to that gentleman. Upon examination Mr. Grant pronounced it a fine quality of marble. It was tested with muriatic acid by marble experts, and they were convinced that it was very valuable. Yesterday Mr. Conway took the specimen to Mr. Conway, of the North End, who polished it and found it to be Belgium black marble. This variety of marble, he said, was very scarce in the United States, and this is the first discovery known on the coast. The marble, when polished, is of a greenish hue.

Mr. Conway says that the ledge is only 50 feet from the Columbia. It is 20 rods wide, and is in sight for 100 feet. The marble is said to be worth 90 cents a foot. Mr. Conway purchased the land a year ago for $800.

Lively in the East End.

The East End of the city presented a lively appearance this morning. Wool continues to come in steadily. Mr. A. Scherneckan, who has returned from a trip to Mitchell and Antelope, reports that shearing is not all done and will continue for some time owing to the fact that shearers are scarce. Not more than half the clip has been hauled, which is the finest staple as a whole that has ever been produced in Eastern Oregon, owing to favorable weather conditions.
