The world's fair will remain open Sundays notwithstanding the influence of the radical religionists and the saloon keepers. The interest manifested by the saloon keepers is easily understood. A man cannot be attending the exposition building and in a saloon at the same time, but if he could not attend the fair there would be some chance of his making a call on the saloon keeper. The opposition offered in the name of religion is not so easily explained. In fact there has not been any explanation given other than that it is the outcome of the old narrow puritanical spirit which holds more to the letter than to the spirit of the law. Sunday should be not only a day of rest and religious observance, but a day on which innocent recreation is allowable. If a visit to the fair comes within that limit, the opening of the fair to provide innocent recreation on Sunday afternoons cannot be considered a desecration of the Sunday. In view of the fact, too, that many thousands of visitors to the fair must be of the class who pay no respect to the religious character of the Sunday, it seems a matter of common prudence to provide them with a means of spending the day innocently instead of leaving them to their own inclinations and the numerous temptations certain to be placed in their way. Then again, it is a hardship to deprive so many thousands of honest working people of their opportunity to see the fair. Hence the fair should be open Sunday, as more evil is likely to result from Sunday closing than from the opening.

Germany is a thorough old country. In anticipation of the coming of cholera the utmost preparations have been made. For instance, all the wells of Berlin have been examined, and out of 800 one-fourth have been declared unfit for use and one-fourth more doubtful. Similar examinations are to be made all over the country. That reminds us that there are a good many people in this city who are still using well water. It ought to be stopped, if necessary by ordinance, because filthy water is the sea in which cholera floats with more joy and less friction than in any other.—Oregon Blade.

The worst thing about getting appointed to a fat office in Oregon is the fact that the successful man has to have his picture printed in the Oregonian. Hon. T. J. Black was made to look something like Sontag after his last battle with the deputy marshals.—Roseburg Review.

If President Cleveland is at a loss for means to remedy the financial stringency, let him subscribe for some of our Oregon papers. The Oregonian alone publishes a new plan almost every day, that, if followed, would make wealth burdensome.

Rate cutting still goes on with every probability that it will be a battle to the death. So far the Union Pacific seems to be suffering the most, judging from the reported falling off of business and their horizontal cuts down of expenses.

The watchdog, Holman, cut out of the appropriation bill at the last moment, the item providing money for the repair of Ford's theater. Democratic economy for you.

SET THE CHILDREN TO WORK.
 An Ingenious Englishman Who Combined a Swing and a Much Needed Pump.
 An English writer on inventive genius tells a story of a certain August Pirch, who is the possessor of a dozen fine healthy children. Mr. Pirch, so the story goes, had a tract of land that could not be used for the want of water, since it was far from any available stream or other body which might prove of use in the fertilization of his acres, and how to irrigate the land without spending a large sum of money was a mystery which, for a long time Mr. Pirch could not solve. He figured out the cost of a well, and found that his resources would permit of his digging a sixty-foot well and the purchase of a cheap pump, but how to make the pump work was a question. Suddenly his inventive mind suggested a solution. He remembered his children and he also called to mind a certain large family swing he had seen in a neighboring town. He knew the swing would please the children, and he hoped through it their pleasure might be able to serve his interests. The well was bored, the pump was set up and the swing was put in working order.
 "Here, now, boys," said he, when all was ready, calling the children to him, "come out here and get in this swing. I'm going to give you something to play with."
 In five minutes the children were flying backward and forward through the air. The pump worked up and down as you please and a fourteen-inch stream of water flowed from the well. Mr. Pirch's scheme had worked. The children do not know they are working, as the swing is some distance from the well and is connected with it by an iron rod which works the pump as the swing moves backward and forward. The scheme has worked well, and it is said that the youngsters pump enough water during their day's sport to irrigate a large tract.—Harper's Young People.

AUTHORITIES DIFFER.
 A School Director Who Conflicted with Webster.
 The reading class was standing in a row upon the floor of an Indiana school-house, and a bright little fellow was drawing a paragraph about a Roman massacre. The president of the school board was present on his regular tour of inspection, and he pompously requested that the boy "read that verse again." The "verse" was read again. "Ah! h'm!" said the great man in a loud voice, "why do you pronounce that word massacre?"
 The boy was silent. "It should be pronounced massacre," continued the great man with a patronizing smile. The boy remained quiet, but the teacher finally spoke.
 "Pardon me, sir," she said, "but the fault is mine if the word was mispronounced. I have taught the class to pronounce it massacre."
 "But why?" insisted the great man, as a look of surprise was followed by a look of pain upon his benign features. "I believe that Webster favors that pronunciation," said the teacher, meekly.
 "Impossible," said the great man. The dictionary was brought and the president of the school board turned over its leaves until he found the word. There was breathless silence as he looked up, for there the word was massacre.
 "I am astonished, madam," he said, at last, "that Daniel Webster should have made such a mistake as that."—Detroit Free Press.

USED THEM IN HIS BLOW-GUN.
 Doctor—"Well, my fine little fellow, you have got quite well again. I was sure the pills I left for you would cure you. How did you take them, in water or in cake?"
 Boy—"Oh, I used them in my blow-gun."
 The little fellow put the nasty, great, gripping, old-fashioned pills to a good use. At most, all his internal economy needed was a dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, easy to take, and are gently aperient, or actively cathartic, according to size of dose. As a laxative, only one tiny Pellet is required.
 The "Pellets" cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.
 The "Pellets" are purely vegetable, and operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation.
