FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1898

A SACRIFICE TO SCIENCE.

Seymour, the mind reader, proposes to be buried alive at Chicago, and not come back to earth until September 24th. He will have barley sown over the grave, which is to sprout, grow and be harvested. A vast number of people will consider his death by suffocation a foregone conclusion and from the depths of their superior wisdom call him a crank and a fool. Other men throughout the ages have been called cranks and fools for advocating some theory that seemed nearly as preposterous as this, but until the occult forces of nature are all understood and we are but just in the primer, no one can say that this man is doomed to die in his grave. History records the name of Galileo, who advocated the novel idea that the earth revolved around the sun. For this he was ridiculed and actually compelled to publicly renounce his doctrine. The air ship has been pronounced a vagary for ages, but it is on the eve of universal use. Edison was recently so impressed and overpowered by the magnitude of the field of invention, and the mystery of electrical force, that he became frightened and seriously considered abandoning his researches. He has promised startling facts for the future of which he has already given a hint. There are secrets yet beyond these, whose existence only is known and whose name is as yet undefinable, of which we see but an occasional effect. Persons have been subjected to hypnotic tests, and lay to all appearance dead. All the tests of medical science have been applied and the patient pronounced inanimate. A looking glass held to the mouth would have condensed upon its surface the faintest breath, an incision into the quick under the finger nail should have caused a quiver of any living nerve; the body remained rigid and the eyelids movable at the will of the operator. And such subjects have come to life at the will of the hypnotist. Such a subject might be buried for a length of time as long as such a state of coma lasted. This is to be proven and Mr. Seymour intends to investigate it by the greatest sacrifice anyone can make to science. If he survives he will be a hero and his name will live longer than those who berate him; if he falls he will exist in the memory of the world fully as long.

The Union Pacific has boasted that it will destroy the town. For this purpose they employ the false smiles of Uriah Heep, and by sly and cajoleries try to fool the people with a sop. We have enjoyed for two years a release from the thralldom of that company, and freedom once obtained will not be lightly surrendered.

There is encouragement to the American boy in the Congressional Directory which has just been issued by the clerk of the printing records of the senate. It may not be his lot to win the presidential prize, which every American boy is taught to believe is within the scope of his ambition and the possibilities of his future, but he can easily imagine himself a member of the house of representatives at some stage of his career, however humble may be his lot today. The history of American statesmen shows that the majority of those who reach high office in this country had humble origins. The number of such instances which are grouped in this latest issue of the Congressional Directory is quite large and very striking—the more so when it is remembered that the biographies which appear in the directory are written by the members themselves, and accordingly there is a delightful vagueness about the biographies of some of the contributors to the book and a refreshing frankness about others. There are four members of the coming house who started in life as blacksmith apprentices, and, strange to say, two of them came from adjoining districts in California.

A rumor is that the Union Pacific intend to equip a store at this point to aid them in their nefarious plan to ultimately rob the people. Let them remember that the paper will have to be paid, and that the lures so shamelessly flaunted in their faces are but to encompass them to their own destruction.

THE STRANGLERS.

A Union Pacific official openly boasted a few months ago that before the summer was over the Regulator would be tied up and grass would be growing in the streets of The Dalles. If a wish could annihilate, it is probable that not only would the prediction be verified, but also that not a vestige of animal or plant life would be left to indicate the spot where a corporation's greed and avarice was successfully set at defiance.

The history of the Union Pacific in this section is one long tale of oppression, founded upon the axiom that "might is right." Freight tariffs in the past have been gauged not by what would bring good round revenues, but by the last flickering drop of financial life-blood that could be wrung to prevent bankruptcy.

It was not always thus. The O. R. & N. Co., who built the line, were held in high esteem. Its officials were, for the most part, Oregon men, who grew up in our generous atmosphere with some sort of regard to the rights of their fellow men. A fair figure was charged for freight, but nothing exorbitant. They were honored and respected and there was harmony between the railroad and the people.

With the advent of the U. P. management came trouble. Arrogance and intolerance on the part of the officials themselves chilled the former friendships, and a system of oppression was begun that drew the last dollar of profit out of the farmer, and rendered legitimate merchandising precarious, the reflex action of which affected for ill every citizen of the country.

While yet struggling with this hateful octopus spasmodic attempts were from time to time made to better the condition of affairs and the people hailed with joy what they supposed was the day of deliverance when the first boat was launched on the river. But before the week which witnessed its launch had expired it was drawn in by the pilant tentacles of the octopus. Another and another shared a like fate, until finally the Regulator was built, controlled by men who under no circumstances would barter their advantage for ignominious gain, and who, be it said in their honor, have stood by the people, and will continue to stand by them if dragged to ruin. In the attempt. As the name implies, the boat has been a regulator. People do not now have to mortgage their store to move their beds; a laboring man can no longer make better wages walking to Portland than paying fare; the farmer, tilling in the hot August sun, does not have to pay all the profit for carrying his wheat to market; and the blacksmith, sweating in the red light of the forge, is no longer at the mercy of a monopoly that makes the price of iron assume the profit of its being wrought. This result has been brought about by unanimity. It is one case among a thousand where a harmony of purpose of a single community has been maintained against an aggressive power, strong in every sense that money and influence can make it, and directed by a watchful intelligence, alert and keen to take advantage of every incident.

Foiled so far, it has just perfected a plan to balk the people and ultimately rob them by inducing the merchants to patronize them by offering freight rates at a merely nominal figure. Mr. Lytle, the courteous and gentlemanly freight agent at this point, nevertheless a faithful employe, has been busily employed in informing the merchants separately that they may have their freight carried for 5 cents per hundred. Is there anybody who can not see through the gauzy scheme? The present schedule of the Union Pacific averages 42¢ per cent; that of the Regulator averages 22¢. The reduction to 5¢ on the part of the Union Pacific is temporary, of course, and if they succeed in driving off the Regulator, the old rate of 42¢ will at once be re-established and perhaps reach a point still higher, for revenge is sweet. In isolated instances their plan may succeed. There is always a Judas to be bought for a few pieces of silver. But the great majority of tradesmen know what has reduced their freight rates in the last two years and are too honorable to be a party to the scheme of a company that has heretofore robbed them, and are spilling for the chance to do it again.

The Chronicle does not believe that any merchant will be so gut by the chaff of the Union Pacific. We have too high a regard for their intelligence as a body, and too great an appreciation of the manner in which they have up to this time stood manfully shoulder to shoulder against the most vicious monopoly this coast has ever known.

Checked —the frightful inroads of Scrofula and all blood-taints. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses the system of all impurities, and restores health and strength. It cures all diseases arising from impure blood. Consumption is one of them. It's simply lung-scrofula. In all its earlier stages, the "Discovery" effects a cure. It's easy to see why. The medicine that masters scrofula in one part, is the best remedy for it in another. It is the best. It's warranted. It's the only blood and lung remedy that's guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money will be refunded. No other medicine of its class does it. How many would be left if they did?

It's the cheapest blood-purifier, sold through druggists, (no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar,) because you only pay for the good you get.

Your money is returned if it doesn't benefit or cure you.

Can you ask more?

WINANS
 THE NEW TOWN has been platted on the old town ground, at the base and falls of Hood river, with large, airy, light, broad streets and every good soil and pure water with shade in profusion, perfect drainage through its mountain climate, the central attraction as a mountain resort for all seasons, being the nearest town to Mt. Hood. It is a complete town with manufacturing center, being the natural center for the growth of the best cedar and fir timber, possessing millions of bush power in its quaking streams and water falls, easily harnessed. A new cheap miller power works, above the town, factories will center, surrounded by soil and climate that cannot be excelled anywhere for fruit and agriculture, and with transportation already secured, you will find this the place to make a perfect home or a paying investment.
 See me on the ground, or address me at Hood River, Wasco County, Oregon.
