"When a man has raised a stake, If he labors then to make Some poor neighbor drop his meat, It insures his own defeat." "No one bulldog yet could eat Every other bulldog's meat. If you have a good-sized bone, Let the other dog alone."

The river has risen six tenths of a foot during the last three days.

A billiputian lives in Milwaukee in the person of 14-year-old Anna Romanie who stands only two feet high.

Mr. Field believes he will have musk melons in the market by Saturday. He was a week ahead of anyone else on strawberries. He has a piece of warm, sandy ground, with a direct exposure to the sun, and sheltered from the wind, by the highest cultivation and infinite care he comes out with the first of various products, for which he secures fancy prices.

One of the train-robbing gang, John Bontag has passed in his checks. He has succumbed to the wounds inflicted by his capturers in the foothills, and his trial for murder is a sensation which the community will be spared. Evans is likely to get round, although he has lost a hand and an eye and is otherwise a dilapidated man. It will be wise, however, not to reckon too much upon resignation to his fate. An opportunity to break jail and skip to the wilds again would not be discarded. Of this clinging to hope Fresno seems to be aware.

Rev. W. H. Wilson's Condition.

Rev. W. C. Curtis is in receipt of a letter from Norman Wilson, dated the 9th, stating that on arrival his father recognized him, and that he is conscious part of the time; but that he is gradually sinking, and there is no encouragement. It is felt that while he may survive for a few weeks, his death is expected at any time. He has to be roused into a sort of semi-consciousness at intervals to give him food and medicine. At these times the difficulty is often encountered of choking.

STARVED TO DEATH.

Three Instances Related by the Oregonian, of Recent Date.

John William Parr, an Englishman, aged about 34 years, died at No. 191 Fourth street, Portland, on the 4th of July, and two days later was buried in Lone Fir cemetery. The body was later exhumed, and it was found he had starved to death.

Parr was a faith curist, an enthusiastic follower of the apostle who lives on Nob hill. He had lived in Portland for several months working as a stone mason. He attended faith-cure meetings regularly at the apostle's house, and finally became convinced that in order to be saved he must fast for 40 days. He began his sacrifice and abstained from food for some time. But nature asserted itself and Parr succumbed.

On Sunday, the 2nd inst., he was in company with some friends and the same evening attended a meeting of faith curists. Tuesday Dr. Palmer was called in to attend him and found him dead in bed. He had been sick only a few hours. The physician made an examination and ascertained that the man had starved himself to death. There were no evidences of foul play, and so he gave a death certificate which authorized Undertaker Holman to bury the body.

It was only Parr's fanaticism that induced him to abstain from food. In his clothing were found $5.10 in cash, a gold watch and chain, a bank book showing that he had on deposit $571 and some valuable papers. He was in no way miserly, and before he attempted fast always lived well. He made no complaint to his friends of being ill, and if he was, he evidently believed his faith was strong enough to carry him through the test.

Parr's case is similar to that of Samuel Yaisle, who died at Monticello, on the East Side, on the 11th of May. Yaisle was an aged man and a faith curist. He attempted a 40 days' fast, but his constitution could not stand it and he died. Other faith curists claimed that he had invoked the wrath of the Almighty by partaking of food on the sly, and death was his punishment.

At Good Samaritan hospital yesterday Henry Benson died from the effects of a long fast. Benson, who was about 55 years of age, was found lying under some brush on the bank of the river in North Portland last Saturday in an exhausted condition. The police were notified and Officer Moore went to the place with the patrol wagon. The man could hardly speak and was terribly emaciated. The officer ascertained that Benson had eaten nothing for over a week, except a few raw fish caught by his partner. City Physician Wheeler ordered him sent to the Good Samaritan hospital, where he was attended to. But his fast and the exposure he was subjected to proved too much for the old man, and he died. His body was buried at the poor farm.

"My little boy was very bad off for two months with diarrhoea. We used various medicines, also called in two doctors, but nothing done him any good until we used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave immediate relief and soon cured him. I consider it the best medicine made and can conscientiously recommend it to all who need a diarrhoea or colic medicine. J. E. Moro Sketchings.

Mr. Laundry's new residence is nearing completion.

The work on W. J. Peddicord's new residence is progressing rapidly under the skillful workmanship of the Slater Bros.

The fourth of July was duly enjoyed by all at the different places; but Moro kept her fireworks until the evening after the rain.

J. B. Adams of The Dalles visited our town this week and selected a town lot in Mowry's addition, just across the street from the school house.

J. B. Mowry has three teams employed hauling lumber from Biggs for his new residence. He has already put up his new wind mill, which will pump the water into a cistern just above the house.

Some of the young folks returned Saturday from their trip to the mountains. Judging from their appearance they must have enjoyed themselves hugely. They were nice and wet at any rate from their ride home in the rain.

The rain last Saturday came in time to insure Sherman county a good crop, and present prospects are that there will be more grain harvested in this county than there has been any previous year, and we hope to see times brighten up some. There was from one and one-half to two inches of rain fell.

We expect our town will make quite a growth now that the prospects are brighter, as there have been quite a number of families talking of moving to town if the crops were good, to have the benefit of the Moro school. It is expected that we shall have a first-class school, to continue eight or nine months, so any one desiring school privileges can be assured that is what they will have if they move to this thriving little burg.

SHARPSBURG, Pa., Jan. 27, 1892.

MR. J. J. KEIL, Sharpsburg, Pa. DEAR SIR—I have used Krause's Headache capsules for some time and want to testify to their value. I tried various well recommended medicines, but got no relief until I used these, and now would not be without them for ten times their cost. Yours respectfully, CHARLES T. SEDGWICK.

THE BOAT RAILWAY.

It Will Have More Than the Government Engineers to Fight.

A Washington dispatch to the Oregonian says:

The boat railway project at The Dalles will have more than the back-handed slap, which the engineers have given it, to prevent its being adopted at the coming session of congress. In the last congress it was bitterly opposed by Paul F. Mohr, who had a lively tilt with Senator Dolph over the scheme. Mohr intends to build a portage road on the Washington side of the river, where the boat railway must be built, if it is constructed at all. In the last congress he interested a great many men against it and possibly he may be able to still have them working the same way. In the last congress it was known that Washington's senators did not look upon the boat railway scheme with the same interest they gave to the Seattle canal, although it was claimed that the benefit would be as great for Washington as for Oregon. Besides it may as well be stated that outside of the Oregon delegation there was a general opinion that the scheme was impracticable. It was one of those pieces of legislation, which, when mentioned in the presence of an Oregonian, was treated with great attention and when the Oregonian turned away there was a quivering of the left eyelid and one of those smiles that betoken incredulity. Legislation which is carried on under these conditions generally gets in the same stage which the boat railway scheme now finds itself. The boat railway was opposed by Newton C. Blanchard of Louisiana, and chairman of the house committee on rivers and harbors, and who will, no doubt, again be at the head of that committee. Blanchard is one of the most powerful men in the house when it comes to river and harbor improvements, and his opposition usually means death to any scheme. He throws it out of the river and harbor bill; insists that it does not belong there and maintains he will not have the river and harbor bill weighed down with any such proposition. He has the same feeling toward the Seattle canal, yet persistent work by Senator Squire may induce the other members of the rivers and harbors committee to think differently. Some day Blanchard may be transplanted to the senate and this block of opposition removed. But at present there seems enough in the way to stop the boat railway proposition. But there is not enough to prevent the Oregon delegation from making a hard fight, and it will certainly try for the boat railway.

The Reception at Mrs. Rinehart's.

The spread at the residence of Mrs. Rinehart yesterday in honor of Mrs. E. M. Wilson and Mrs. C. McFarland was a very elaborate affair. The tables were placed in the form of a Greek cross, and 25 ladies were seated at it. At opposite ends on the one side were Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. McFarland and the other Mrs. C. M. Donnell and Mrs. M. Roberts. The other ladies present were Mesdames J. T. Peters, Woods, F. Taylor, H. Holson, H. Gourlay, Isabella Gray, A. R. Thompson, Jos. Condon, Jos. Beezley, Geo. Blakeley, Mrs. Bradford of San Francisco, E. C. Pease, G. Morgan, J. M. Patterson, R. F. Gibbons, W. C. Curtis, W. E. Rinehart, L. Dunham, S. L. Brooks, O. Sylvester and J. Marden.

The table was profusely adorned with choice flowers, and the most delicate of china. Mrs. Wilson gave a very interesting talk upon her experiences at the world's fair, and some of the remarkable sights witnessed.
