A Washington correspondent believes that the international arbitration over the Behring sea dispute will not be settled peaceably. That in the event England is worsted she will rely upon the force of arms, and that if the United States is beaten she will not surrender her rights. He says: I am sure that many influential people in the United States would advise the administration not to give up American rights in Behring sea, even if the arbitrators should decide that there were no such things as American rights at that sea. The presence of a Russian fleet of war vessels would remain permanently on the Atlantic coast furnishes good presumptive evidence that our government is taking precautions to strengthen its floating fighting force; for, even if there were no special alliance in existence between the two governments, Russia would be our natural ally in case of trouble with England over Behring sea matters, and so far as Great Britain is concerned the Russian war vessels in New York harbor are so many additions to the American navy. Understand me I am not predicting trouble. Still I should not call a man silly who talked of the probabilities of trouble growing out of the arbitration.

The legal status of lemon extract was involved in the examination before United States Commissioner Kenyon recently of Albert Smith, a Spokane clerk, who is charged with selling intoxicating liquor to Indians. It has been discovered that several wholesale houses in the west have made a special effort to cater to the trade of the noble red man. The result was a quality of lemon extract containing only enough of the essential oil to give it a perceptible flavor and a considerable quantity of alcohol. In this case a chemist found that the extract was composed of 55 per cent. alcohol, 44.75 per cent. water, and .25 per cent. of oil of lemon, he said, on the stand. It was intoxicating, too. The quantity of oil of lemon was about one-half of the usual amount used in trade. The lemon extract phase of the Indian question is one that Secretary Hoke Smith has never had an opportunity to be interviewed on, although it has long confronted Indian agents and government officials.

Mark Twain's story in Tom Sawyer of how the boy got the fence whitewashed without any expenditure of elbow effort, and with a net result of gain in boyish treasures, was equalled the other day by a man in South Denver. He wanted his back yard dug up for future cultivating purposes, so in a burst of confidence he informed his nearest neighbor that he had drawn his money from the bank and was now quite easy in his mind, as he had the shiners safely buried in his back yard. He subsequently had a sudden call from home for a few days, being careful to tell this same neighbor of his certain absence from home for at least a week, and then made a somewhat ostentatious departure. After the lapse of three or four days the gardener returned to his dwelling, and smiled a meaning smile when he found that his back yard had been spaded all over to the depth of two or three feet, and could with trifling labor be planted out as he desired.

It has been reported in Washington that the Chinese telegraph system has been connected with the Russian system, so that messages may now be sent overland between any part of China, Russia, Europe, and by cable to Africa, North and South America and Australia. The whole world is now wired and telegraphically connected.

It is reported that Stevenson did not visit the Monterey on account of a fancied slight on the part of her officers. This conduct looks very childish, if the report is true. If Stevenson wanted to see the Monterey he should have gone and seen it.

The relief fund for the sufferers by the cold storage fire at the world's fair has reached over one hundred thousand dollars.

TREATY WITH HAWAII.

Provisional Government Will Submit a New One.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—The steamer Australian arrived from Honolulu this morning, bringing advices up to July 10th, as follows:

Since yesterday it has been learned positively what the provisional government's policy and position regarding future treaty relations with the United States are and will continue to be. In brief, it is as follows: The new treaty drawn, which was a document covering objections which arose in the United States during the visit of the Hawaiian commissioners to Washington, will not be forwarded. The treaty matter has been fully discussed at special sessions of the councils lately, and a draft of the new treaty has within a few days been returned from the committee, which has been indorsed by the government and the councils unofficially. The document contains five articles, which are briefly as follows:

Article I cedes from the date of exchange of the ratification of the treaty, without reserve, all the rights of sovereignty in and over the Hawaiian islands and dependencies to the United States to become an integral part thereof.

Article II cedes and transfers the absolute fee of all government and crown lands, public buildings, ports, rivers, fortifications, military or naval equipments, and all other public property.

Article III provides that the existing government of the Hawaiian islands, and the laws relating to its internal policy are to be continued for five years, to be executed and carried out under the direction of a United States commissioner appointed by the president and senate, said commissioner to reside in the Hawaiian islands, with power to veto within ten days any act passed by the local government, which shall thereupon become void unless afterward approved by the president of the United States.

Article IV prohibits the immigration of Chinese laborers into the Hawaiian islands until such time as congress shall provide further legislation. It also prohibits Chinese laborers now here from entering the United States, otherwise the immigration and labor laws are to remain as they are where they do not come into conflict with the constitution of the United States, or such future laws as congress may provide.

Article V provides that the public debt shall be assumed by the United States, but the Hawaiian government shall continue to pay interest thereon, congress to provide the future currency of the islands. The government has decided to include the substance of this new treaty draft in the instructions to Commissioner Alexander and Minister Thurston, who will bring the matter before the United States government in the form of suggestions in case President Cleveland decides to finally withdraw the Harrison treaty of annexation and determines to submit a new treaty or some modification of the old.

Professor W. D. Alexander will carry these instructions with him to Washington on the 25th or 27th.

THE NEW TOWN has been platted on the old camp ground, at the Forks and Falls of Hood river, with large, slightly elevated streets and alleys, good soil and pure water, with shade in profusion, perfect drainage, delightful mountain climate, the central attraction as a mountain summer resort for all Oregon.

Being the nearest town to Mt. Hood. It is unparalleled as a manufacturing center, being the natural center for 150 square miles of the best cedar and fir timber, possessing millions of logs-pewee in its logging streams and water falls, easily harnessed. Where cheap motive power exists, there the manufacturing factories will center, surrounded by soil and climate that cannot be equalled anywhere for fruit and agriculture, and with transportation already assured you will find this the place to make a perfect home or a paying investment.
