Cattle Thieves Will Be Shot When Caught Stealing .-- Row Over a Faithless Wife.

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 28 .- Dick Hall, the noted moonshiner chief, has been killed by John Belcher on the bank of Elkhorn river, Hill county. Hall was a married man, having obtained his wife by murder. He was at first completely fascinated with her, but when he saw Mrs. Belcher, the wife of his slaver, his heart became her's. He was a handsome follow, and won the love of became angry and they separated. Paulsen is a Dane. Next morning she left her home to go, as she said, to live with relatives. After her departure an enemy of Hall went to Belcher and told him of Hall's duplicity. Belcher was enraged, and said: "Tell the members of Hall's gang they had better elect another leader, as I intend to kill him." Belcher mounted his horse and gave chase to Hall and his wife. He rode 48 hours without dismounting, and finally, early yesterday morning, drew rein where Hall and his wife were camped. Belcher rushed up to his wife and struck her down. As he did so, Hall ran in and knocked him down and gave him a drubbing. Belcher fought hard, but was badly handicapped by Mrs. Belcher, who had fastened her hands in his hair. He finally succeeded in drawing his pistol, and placed it against Hall's side and pulled the trigger. Belcher then jumped up and was about to kill his wife, when Hall, between gasps, begged Feelings. NEW YORK, July 28 .- The World's special London cable says: England threw off today the mask of apathy behind which she has been concealing her real feelings about the Siamese complications. She is rapidly making ready to put herself across the pathway of triumphant France. It is reported tonight that the foreign office has instructed Lord Dufferin to demand of the French government a positive assurance that English ships will not be molested, but allowed to enter and leave the Siamese ports freely, and if the French government refuses, he is to ask for his passports and leave Paris at once. > The various phases of socio-political life at Washington contain few more interesting aspects than is to be found in the notable turnouts that from time to time have become familiar to the eyes of Washingtonians. It is the foreign equipages that have been most resplendent. A genuine sensation was produced by the late D'Arco Valley, who, shortly after his installation here as German minister, made the round of calls on the cabinet in his dark-blue paneled carriage attended by his men in full military regalia. He was a sight long to be remembered. Mr. Greger, of the Russian legation, was also instrumental in giving Washingtonians their first The tournout, with its dramatic accessories, even to the stolid-looking, bignosed driver with busky crop of hair cut straight from ear to ear, standing out like a whiskbroom under his peculiarly flat, low-crowned hat, were imported direct from Russia. The late president Arthur, who for dignified bearing and the general elegance of his equipages, has never been excelled by any incumbent of the white house, owned a little piebald pony presented to him by an Indian chief during a trip through the Yellowstone park. The president was a tall man, which was so unexpectedly like that famous one of John Gilpin that the experience was never repeated.
