Valuable Horse Killed.

Mr. James Benson, jr., a prosperous farmer, met with a misfortune last evening in the loss of a valuable horse. Mr. Benson had driven his team to the city and unhitched and tied them to his wagon. In due time, after finishing his business, he repaired to his wagon and began hitching up his team, when his large chestnut stepped on a broken buggy shaft which broke in two and the sudden snap sprung it up with such force as to penetrate the groin so as to sever a blood vessel, and the flow was so rapid that the animal died in a few minutes. The loss is severe, the horse being valued at $150, and a fine animal in every respect.

Counterfeit Half Dollars.

We were shown a counterfeit half dollar which is so fine a piece of workmanship that unless one is on the lookout, is liable to be loaded. The half we saw was of an 1892 imprint, and one defect noticeable is on the milling edge, which is imperfect in one place. It is also a trifle light in weight. The ring of the metal is fair, and would not particularly arouse suspicion of its genuineness. Look out for the queer.

Verdict of Coroner's Jury.

The body of Wm. R. Taffe showed slight bruises and cuts, such as might have been made by contact with rocks or drift, but there were no fractures. The verdict of the jury was that Wm. R. Taffe was accidentally drowned from a boat on Sunday, the 23d inst., while coming from Grants to Celilo.

A Marvelous Escape.

The fiendish ingenuity of things inanimate finds a very good example in the following, from the Goldendale Sentinel: James Burgen, son of Thomas Burgen of Chamberlain Flat, had a close call one day last week that resulted in a marvelous escape from death. He was on top of a load of hay and was unwinding the lines from the upright stake in front of the rack when the stake gave way and he fell forward on to the doubletrees, part of the load of hay falling on top of him as the team started on a dead run. In this position he was partly dragged and partly carried for about two hundred yards, when he crawled on top of the tongue and from thence on to one of the horses. Just then and while the horse was bucking vigorously, one wheel struck a rock and the sudden halt threw Mr. Burgen to the ground. One wheel passed diagonally over his leg a little above the ankle and over one arm. Then the rack in some mysterious way tilted and the whole load, rack and all, fell on top of him. His father and Mr. Stedham had followed the runaway team as fast as possible, and as Mr. Stedham came up to the wreck James crawled out and started to catch the horses, which were still running with the wagon attached. He had gone only a little way when he was compelled to desist. An examination showed that beyond being bruised at the places where the wheel passed over him, Mr. Burgen was not otherwise injured and will soon be as well as ever. But it was a marvelous escape, and those who saw the accident never expected to see James come out of it alive. The team finally ran up against a fence, and neither the team nor the wagon were found injured in the least. But the hay rack was nothing but a mass of kindling wood.
