TO DE A OHER.

Mastery of Cooking and What It Requires to Attain It.

In Europe, a man who begins as a scullion may remain a scullion forever, for all his effort, washing potatoes till there is so little sign of earth upon them that they might have fallen from heaven, and making salad herbs as free from soil as if they grew in air, unless he pays a liberal tribute in money to the cook just above him, and when he has learned all that man knows, pays another and a larger sum to that man's superior, and so on through the whole round, till nothing remains to learn, and he has spent far more than his wages, and something like that which a liberal education costs. But, says a writer in Harper's Bazar, when he has reached that point he has mastered all points; he knows perfectly how to cut, carve, truss, lard, roast, boil, bake, fry, broil, and knows, moreover, all about sauces, soups, pastries, sweets and fancy dishes. He expects to practice no one of these branches himself with his own hands: he has, so to say, understudies in them all, or representatives; he himself is like the reader of the score and the director of a grand orchestra.

Nor is this all he must know; usually he has made himself able to speak French, German, Spanish and English. He has some knowledge of the arts; he is a chemist, a modeler, a colorist, more or less of an artist, a designer, a man of taste, and necessarily of more or less reading. He must know something of natural history, the seasons of game, the products of far countries, the state of the markets, and must be acquainted with the events of the day, to which he is often obliged to adapt the names of his dishes. He must be SODA WATER AND ICE CREAM. an economist, too, allowing no waste by his subordinates, and in order to do this he must know the exact amounts required in everything; and then he must know all that can be done with sugar and ice, and the whole story of CIGARS AND : SPECIAL TOBACCO.

The Mojavan "Spirit Owls."

ane Mojaves believe that all who die and are not cremated are turned into owls, and when they hear the dismal screech of one of the above-named creatures of the night they tell you that it is the spirit of some dead Mojave who has returned to advise his people to submit to the ordeal of fire. When one of the tribe dies his relatives and immediate friends do not eat salt or wash themselves for four days. They read The Chronicle to get the latest and Their heaven is "White Mountain;" place where unincinerated warriors are transformed into owls.
