SHIPMENTS COMMENCED.

The Earl Company as a Factor of Fruit Interests.

Another car of the Earl Fruit company was loaded today and will be shipped to Chicago tonight. A reporter visited one of the cars, where he found Mr. J. A. McDonald, the affable agent of the company, busily engaged in packing the fruit in the car. Once inside, the most notable change was the temperature, presumably a good deal the same as the lodge in some vast wilderness, so oh'd for every summer in The Dalles for the last twelve years. Mr. McDonald said the temperature was kept uniformly at 55 degrees. There are refrigerators at each end, so arranged that there is a circulation of cool air from above and below. The fruit boxes rest on slats and the apertures in them readily admit of this cooled air, and again the baskets within the boxes have sloping edges, so that every one of the fruit is accessible to the outer air. The capacity of each car is 24,000 pounds, and they are generally taxed to the limit. Another car will leave on Saturday and another Tuesday, which will be the last of the peach plums. Each car has a refrigerator capacity of ten or twelve thousand pounds of ice, and whenever needed the ice is replenished. The cars are attached to the passenger train until Green River is reached, when they join the regular California fast fruit train.

The peach, apple and pear crops will be successively handled by the Earl Fruit Company. This company watches the markets closely and gets better prices at all times than can be done by any one individual. They are not confined to a state or the United States, and ship apples as far away as Aus-

The business of the Earl Fruit company in this section may be said to be missionary work, for their operations this year in this section will be attended with a loss. The output of fruit is too small to justify the expenses.

Then there are other minor matters which conspire to render the business unprofitable at this time. For instance the baskets costs them so much that they are compelled to charge the growers $15 per thousand for them, whereas in California they can furnish them for $9. The fruit boxes are also a little more expensive, owing to the manufacture of them in lesser quantities here. Another reason is that not all the grow-ers are sufficiently informed as to packers are sufficiently informed as to packing the fruit. Too much care cannot be exercised in this regard, as there is a large percentage of loss in fruit imperfeetly packed. Mr. McDonald says, however, that the fruit growers show considerable aptitude as a whole, and he makes but slight criticism on this

Each year will greatly add to our fruit output. There is no danger of raising too much. In fact the more that is raised the more felicitously it can be handled and the greater the profits to each grower. With our marvelous adaptibility of soil and climate for fruit growing it is surprising how small an acreage there is in fruit, and Mr. Mc-Donald thinks it is the height of folly on the part of many who raise wheat instead of fruit. The profits on the one are ten times greater than the other. Wheat can be raised in any country, but it is not so with fruit.
