THE OCTOBER FAIR.

Every property owner, every farmer, every stock raiser, every good citizen should take an active interest from now on in regard to the district fair by the Eastern Oregon Agricultural Society, beginning October 10th at The Dalles. A creditable display at this time is the most valuable advertisement that could be made, and will do more to raise land and property values, by attracting attention, than any plan that could be devised. Wasco county is blessed with more advantages than fall to the lot of the average section of the commonwealth, and neglecting to properly exhibit them would be shameful. Wyoming proudly shows her coal, iron and oil resources; Montana her mineral wealth, Nebraska her corn-fed pork. They do well to show them; they are pitifully deplete in that more important industry, the capacity for raising fruit. The fruit produced by Wasco county is peerless. No quarter of the known world can excel us in that, and the fact ought to be widely heralded. There is room for a hundred times more population than we now have, for not a hundredth part of the soil available for fruit raising is utilized for that purpose. Yet fortunes are being made by those who have entered into fruit-raising as a business. Aside from fruit, what country can excel our nutritious and abundant bunchgrass, that gives sustenance to our herds of cattle, horses and sheep? The animals give evidence of the superiority of their natural feed in their sleek and well-filled coats of fur, and they should be exhibited at the fair. Even our wild flowers furnish a superior article of honey, and bees should find place in agricultural hall. Experience has proven that the women always do their part in preparing preserved fruit, jams and jellies in a most attractive way, and line the sides of the building with their handiwork of needle and brush. It is especially important that the fair this year be at least equal to the best ever given here. About this time the fruits of our exhibit at Chicago will begin to be realized, and there will doubtless be hundreds of visitors present to see if our promises made were of real or imaginary significance. Then it will be that our display, if properly made, as it should be, will appeal to their best judgment and they will desire to emigrate to the land where such fruit grows, where such stock is raised, and where such fair women know so well the useful household arts, as well as the ornamental and decorative ones.

England is also undergoing hard times, and a London paper attributes the depression a result of that in America. There is a nice compliment in this.

The people who are taking the financial stuffing out of their old stockings are doing the country much more good than the gentlemen who are engaged in stuffing the Congressional Record.

Pasteur in his home and in his laboratory constitute one of the most important articles in McClure's for September. This is really a twofold description of the famous scientist, portraying him as a husband and father, and as the greatest bacteriologist of the century.

There is considerable speculation as to when the regulations prescribed by the Behring sea tribunal for the protection of the sealing industry will go into effect. Those best competent to judge are of the opinion that the regulations can hardly be put into practical operation before the 1st of January next. The decision has not yet been received by the president in official form, and until it is so received it cannot be officially promulgated as the law of the land.

There is no uncertain sound in the closing words of Hon. Thos. B. Reed's speech before the house Saturday. He said: "The newly-chosen democratic president found himself powerless in his first great recommendation to his own party, and was forced to appeal to the patriotism of another party, whose patriotism never had been appealed to in vain." The speaker sketched the salient points in the financial history of the republican party, and closed by saying that "when the day came, as it surely would, for that party to lead the country back to prosperity, it would take back with it its ancient glory undimmed by adversity, and its ancient honor unscathed by defeat."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23, 1893.

The debate in the house has worn out its welcome. Even the proletariat that sits in the galleries is becoming tired. The toes of the mad mob's million feet fronted to the capitol a few days ago; the tracks now point in another direction. There is little to attract the spectator. There is no picturesque to be found anywhere, nor any violence, nor anything that ordinarily attracts the public. From the spectacular point of view the extra session of the Fifty-third congress is a distinct failure. Grave results depend upon its action, but the calcium lights and stage illusions are wanting.

The unconditional repeal men have been very active. They have done work while other people have talked. A recording committee has been appointed and also a proselyting committee. The duty of the one is to keep a score of available votes; the duty of the other is to make as many converts as possible. Both are laboring hard. From the unconditional repeal standpoint it is a very active canvass.

Here at the national capital come indications of a better feeling throughout the country. The banks are in improved shape, and the atmosphere around Controller Reekie's office in the treasury has perceptibly cleared. Every indication of a let-up in the existing stringency, small or great, is an encouraging factor in the situation. It may be but a glimpse of the coming dawn, but the morning twilight always bespeaks broad daylight ahead. It affords assurance that the recuperative energies of the American people may yet obtain mastery of the evil conditions with which they are beset; that the wonderful resources of the country are ultimately bound to count in the reversal of trade balances; that the conservative and courageous action of our great financial institutions is coping successfully with the emergency.

In the natural order of things the process of recovery will be slow, but a patient possessing the vitality of the United States cannot always remain bed-ridden. The disease will run its course, and the sick man will get well. Nothing but some stupendous and incredible blunder on the part of congress can throw him into a relapse. The country looks to congress for no such blunder, but rather for restoratives and stimulants that shall hasten convalescence. Congress is already at work upon measures supplemental to the silver question, that will aid in bracing up our distempered finances by augmenting the volume of currency, enabling the unimpeded transportation of crops, and inducing the vast amount of money now idly hoarded to venture forth from its vaults and hiding places in quest of investments. Relief is certain to come from some source. If congress fails to furnish it the people themselves will devise it. This is too rich and strong a country to be permanently trampled under foot by misfortune. There are evidences of returning stability even in the absence of legislation. Congress, however, will, in its own leisurely time, come to the rescue. It will sooner or later give its lungs a rest and allow its practical business sense an opportunity to vindicate itself.

The Maharajah of Kapurthala, his premier, and private secretary, with tinted wasp nets on their heads, occupied the diplomatic gallery of the house last Saturday, to the manifest wonder of the rest of the people. Although Col. Ike Hill did the honors with a flaming geranium on his coat, the visiting royalty failed to see the whole show. Czar Reed was not in action, nor the silver-tongued and silver-haired Breckinridge, the two most-pointed-out men; nor did they have an opportunity to see Joe Cannon in action, with his sleeves rolled up, nor Judge Bland denouncing the robbers of Wall street. When told some of the things he had missed, Jat Jat Singh announced his desire to come again.

The financial issue has broken the V-shaped combination that has so long obtained in the senate. Vance, Vest and Voorhees are not agreed.

rushed into a newspaper office recently, and threatened to "clean out" the establishment, because they printed his verse wrong. Said he: "I wrote, 'To dwell forever in a grove of peace,' and you idiots put it 'a pot of grease.'" The mortified editor presented him with a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, a year's subscription and an apology. The little "Pellets" positively cure sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the stomach, bowels and liver. It's a large contract, but the smallest thing in the world do the business—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're the smallest, but the most effective. They go to work in the right way. They cleanse and renovate the liver, stomach and bowels thoroughly—but they do it mildly and gently. You feel the good they do—but you don't feel them doing it. They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You only pay for the good you get. That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on, through druggists.

THE NEW TOWN has been platted on the old camp ground, at the Forks and Falls of Hood river, with large, sightly lots, broad streets and alleys, good soil and pure water, with shade in profusion, perfect drainage, delightful mountain climate, the central attraction as a mountain summer resort for all Oregon, being the nearest town to Mt. Hood. It is unparalleled as a manufacturing center, being the natural center for 150 square miles of the best cedar and fir timber, possessing millions of horse-power in its dashing streams and waterfalls, easily harnessed. Where cheap motive power exists, there the industries will center, surrounded by soil and climate that cannot be excelled anywhere for fruit and agriculture, and with transportation already assured you will find this the place to make a perfect home or a paying investment.
