SHOUP

The Former Speaks for Silver and the Latter Against It.

THE REPEAL A LOBBY MEASURE

Dolph Says the Business Depression Is Due to the Threat of Tariff Reform.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13. - Shoup this morning addressed the senate in opposition to the Wilson bill. He made a review of the condition of affairs as they existed twelve months ago, and showed by facts and figures cited that we were then prosperous. He said at that time both parties had declared for a double standard, and that Cleveland, as well as Harrison, had accepted the nomination for president with full knowledge of this pledge. Shoup did not pretend to know when Cleveland became convinced it was necessary that the country should come to a nonmetallic basis, but he did know that Villard and others appeared in Washington and began to lobby for the repeal of the Sherman law immediatety after his are fully 40,000 strangers in and about election, and it was a fact that the re- town. wards and punishment of the incoming administration were invoked to influence that legislation. The speaker did not believe the Sherman act had anything to do with the financial crisis. It injured no one, he said, except the residents of the silver-producing states. Indeed, he considered it had been of much benefit to the nation at large. The Sherman law was now the only bulwark between bimetalism and monometalism in the country. He believed the passage of a free-coinage bill would immediately restore confidence and enlarge our trade. Repeal would result in removing this country from the head of the column of Al producers of precious metals; in a contradiction of currency and it is now believed she went direct to Knobs. The woman is very communiand in the weakening of the country by Montevideo without touching at any cative and regards the matter as being destroying one of its great industries. Brazilian port. He drew a strong picture of the distress that would be occasioned in the silver-producing states and asked: "Must the prayerful appeal of these people for justice pass unnoticed?" Dolph of Oregon followed Shoup. He attributed the disturbance in the country to the threat of hostility to a protective policy. The current of events had confirmed it. His impression was that the Sherman act had little to do with the business depression, and he would undertake to show that our financial condition was what might have been expected from the success of the democrats, whose platform pledged the party to a reversal of the protective eystem. Mr. Dolph then proceeded to argue against the free coinage of silver, from the silver states who attempted to make this question a sectional one. He important measure as the pending bill by sectional influence, he is unworthy of a seat in this house. All our industries are so intimately connected that one could not be struck down without all being injured. Free coinage will not promote the silver industry, and it is not just to charge the supporters of the Wilson bill with being the enemies of the silver-producing states. The senstors who oppose free silver are not hostile to silver. They oppose free coinage because they believe that it would drive both silver and gold from circulation and would give the United States a depreciated currency, and take it out of the class of prominent nations and place it side by side with Mexico. Everyone agrees that the prosperity of the country will be promoted by the concurrent use of gold and silver. But there are points of disagreement. The men who oppose the free coinage of silver do so because they believe that such coinage is impracticable. I do not believe that with the free coinage of silver the United can secure a concurrent circulation of gold and silver or increase the price of silver in the world. It is as absurd to claim this as it would be to say that the United States can make wheat worth $1 a bushel by offering to pay $1 for a bushel. The United States cannot ignore the action of the great commercial nations of the world in regard to silver."

> Systematic Child Murder. VIENNA, Sept. 14.-A sensation was caused by the arrest of two women living in separate villages in the district of Kuttenburg, Bohemia. It seems they engaged systematically in the business of murdering children whose parents desired to have them out of the way for any reason. They contracted to dispose of the bodies effectually, guaranteed seerecy, and did a thriving business at 5 l florins per child. The discovery was made by accident. One of the women actually kept account-books, in which she entered the sums received, from whom, the age and description of the child and t of By the of Seattle has been reduced to $125,000. help of this horrible record the authorities expect not only to convict the women, but also a large number of guilty

ARKANSAS CITY, Sept. 14 .- The hot weather, which is causing the homeseekers so much suffering, continues. The sun is blazing hot and the winds, lack of water and shelter are causing increased sickness and prostration. Six more registration clerks were engaged this morning. The work is proceeding somewhat faster. Men in line have been there since Monday evening and are literally exhausted. Hundreds are afflicted with throat and lung disorders, caused by breathing the dustladen air. Many are obliged to drop out to secure the services of physicians. Several strippers were prostrated during the night and this morning. The Santa Fe trains arrived late last night in five crowded sections. This morning crowded trains came in over all the lines.
