SATURDAY, . . . SFPT. 16, 1893

Organized gangs of crooks may for a time defy the law and apparently flourish. But sooner or later their sins find my memory, I wish to call your attenthem out, they become as a stench in the nostrils of the law-abiding, and vigprous measures suddenly drive them from their vantage ground, and they are broken up and dispersed. The extensive gang of horse thieves operating throughout the Northwest will in good time share a like experience, though they now seem to be thriving. The dispatches tell of even a larger and better organized gang than this that must succumb to the law. It is a distillers' union, a brotherhood of moonshiners which has just been located in North Georgia. It is a strange sort of association, having headquarters in Murray county, and having a membership of hundreds scattered throughout the surrounding counties. The objects of the association are to protect the members from the government, and to encourage the manufacture and sale of illicit whisky. When a member of the union is arrested, it is the duty of the other members to see that he is released. If the deputy marshal gets one witness to swear that he saw the man making whisky, three or four will testify to an alibi. Each member is bound by an oath signed in blood. He is sworn to kill any member who informs on another. In this way they hoped to protect each other from revenue men, but their secret leaked out, and it has become necessary to bring prisoners to Atlanta for trial to get them away from the influence of the distillers' union.

Reports come of forest fires in Wisconsin which are even more disastrous than have occurred on the coast. They tell of an unprecedented destruction of timber, besides the loss of life and property. The originator of a forest fire cannot commit a crime more far reaching in its consequences than this. A city may burn, and the lives lost have no effect upon others, while the property materials consumed are comparatively small and may easily be replaced. But when a third of a state is in flames, as Wisconsin is said to be, the results have an influence for all time. Statistics now show that the timber supply of the world is only sufficient for the demands of 300 years, but if it is to be burned in Of Des Moines, Iowa, writes under such vast tracts, the estimate will be changed to a paltry figure. Besides this the decrease in rainfall will hasten the end so pitifully described in Camille Flammarion's imaginative but logical tale,"Omega, or the End of the World."

The financial outlook is brightening. If congress does not soon prescribe the medicine, the patient will have recovered without it.

GENTLEMEN:—Having suffered a great deal from headache for years and beins unable to get relief until it would wear away of itself. I saw Krause's Headache Capsules advertised. I tried them, and now am never without them, finding it the onlyremedy that will give relie! When I now find a headache coming on I take a capsule and slways find the relief instantaneous. Respectfully yours, G. H. WRIGHT, Boston, Mass.

The above letter is only one of the many which go to prove the remarkable benefits received from the use of Krause's Headache Capsules. Any persons suffering from headache should procure these capsules at once. Beware of imitations. The genuine are sold only in bozes and have the word Krause on the label; none other genuine.
