THE INNS OF ITALY.

Conditions Which Would Not Be Agreeable to All Travelers.

Italian life is, even in small villages, all out-of-doors. The kitchen of an Italian inn, no matter of what degree, has always a warm hearth, and its larder is more plentifully stored than a public house in England of the same description. The only faults—some one may think it is a long and a rather complete list—are noise, dirt and universal disorder and confusion.

They never know what rooms they have; they bawl out to each other, the landlord to the landlady, and the latter to the waiter: "Try number fifty-seven or forty-six" till at last they find you a bedchamber.

In the morning there is knocking at your next door neighbor's, or by mistake at your own door, to ask whether it be not you who are to be off by the early coach at six; or maybe it is the waiter, officiously waiving you up to inform you that "it is only four, and you have still two hours for your slumber."

You always seem to catch them at the wrong moment, always find them unprepared, as if theirs were anything but an open house, and a traveler the most unlooked-for thing in the world. Their cordial greeting and friendly bustle help you to overlook the discomfort that every traveler is sure to experience, and the abundance of the table is on the plane with the innkeeper's appetite—he is ever ready "to eat and let eat."

QUEER THINGS IN JAPAN.

Sentimental Views of the People Regarding Flowers and Marriage.

The Japanese have a plant called "Omoto," whose growth and condition are believed by many of that curious race to typify the marriage state. When a young couple of "believers" marry, they carry with them to their home a specimen of the omoto, plant it and carefully tend and watch it, in the full confidence that so long as it shows healthy development the permanence and prosperity of the marriage fortunes involved are positively assured.

The Japanese, as is well known, are full of sentiment regarding flowers, and still another instance of this trait occurs in the matter of proposals of marriage. In houses where there are marriageable daughters, it is the custom to suspend from a window, or veranda, by light chains, an empty vase or flowerpot. The suitor, instead of serenading his innamorata, approaches her dwelling, bearing some choice plant in his hand, and this he carefully deposits with the necessary earth in the empty vase. This is done surreptitiously, and the act is never witnessed. Its performance, however, is viewed in the light of an honorable proposal of marriage, in regard which the young lady interested free to decide as she pleases.

If the donor is the right man, she takes care of his gift, tends and waters it, and thus makes it evident that he is her accepted suitor. If, however, he is not in favor with either the lady herself or her parents, the plant is remorselessly torn from the vase and thrown aside, where the waiting and anxious lover finds it, blighted like his hopes.

THE DALLES

Wasco County, Oregon.

The Gate City of the Inland Empire is situated at the head of navigation on the Middle Columbia, and is a thriving, prosperous city.

ITS TERRITORY.

It is the supply city for an extensive and rich agricultural and grazing country, its trade reaching as far south as Summer Lake, a distance of over two hundred miles.

The Largest Wool Market.

The rich grazing country along the eastern slope of the Cascades furnishes pasture for thousands of sheep, the wool from which finds market here.

The Dalles is the largest original wool shipping point in America, about 5,000,000 pounds being shipped last year.

ITS PRODUCTS.

The salmon fisheries are the finest on the Columbia, yielding this year a revenue of thousands of dollars, which will be more than doubled in the near future.

The products of the beautiful Klickitat valley find market here, and the country south and east has this year filled the warehouses, and all available storage places to overflowing with their products.

ITS WEALTH.

It is the richest city of its size on the coast and its money is scattered over and is being used to develop more farming country than is tributary to any other city in Eastern Oregon.

Its situation is unsurpassed. Its climate delightful. Its possibilities incalculable. Its resources unlimited. And on these corner stones she stands.

SHOE FACTORY

For Sale at a Bargain.

The undersigned, having secured the machinery and fixtures of what was intended for a first-class shoe factory, will sell the same at a bargain. Here is an engine and boiler of 40-odd horse power, and a large amount of shoe machinery, lasts, line shafting, pulleys, belting and findings—almost a complete shoe factory.

Here is also one of the best sites for successfully operating a factory of this kind to be found in this country. Write for particulars at once, to
